Sabotage Blamed for Fatal Train Crash

FOUR DIE, 107 HURT AS CARS LEAVE RAILS

Officials Charge Spikes Were Removed From Track Near Pittsburgh.

RESCUERS WADE TO HELP

Injured Marooned in Wreckage In Icy Waters of Ohio River.

(By Associated Press)

BADEN, Pa. — Pennsylvania railroad officials today blamed saboteurs for the derailing of a crowded passenger train — three of whose cars plunged into the freezing waters of the Ohio river—killing four persons and injuring 107 last night.

E. W. Smith, vice president of the railroad, said "all the spikes were removed from one rail" and the wreck was "very definitely caused by sabotage."

The Cleveland-Pittsburgh train, carrying 112 passengers and a crew of 11, was roaring along at 60 miles an hour through a snowstorm when it met disaster near this small town about 22 miles northwest of Pittsburgh.

The locomotive jumped the tracks and overturned with a terrific crash, whipping its four coaches and bagage car over a 50-foot embankment to the river. The baggage car and two coaches were partly submerged. The other cars lay twisted along the river's edge.

Screams of the injured—men, women and children—rang out in an atmosphere made eerie by the wind and snow and orange-red glare of steel furnaces at mills on the opposite side of the river.

The least hurt passengers and crewmen quickly scrambled to the aid of the seriously injured, some of whom lay submerged in the icy water.

Authorities learned of the tragedy when an injured passenger,

185 Civic Music Workers Launch Member Campaign

One hundred and eighty-five Civic Music campaign workers started today to enroll members for the 1941-42 Civic Music series, hopeful that last season's record membership will be exceeded.

The workers were under the direction of General Chairman Mrs. Paul F. Cropper and six majors—Mrs. Thornton Moore, Mrs. E. D. Gibson, Mrs. George Hall, Mrs. D. O. Meese and the Misses Hester Robinson and Florence McDonald. Also assisting in the campaign is Mrs. Mercedes Walker, representing Civic Music's New York headquarters. Mrs. Walker arrived today from Canton, where a successful campaign has just been concluded.

Workers will hold their annual dinner meeting at 6:30 p. m. today, at Grace Episcopal church. Campaign details will be outlined and workers given final instructions. Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, associate president, will preside. Mrs Stanley Richardson is dinner chairman.

Mrs. Cropper said today that campaign leaders were confident that last season's membership of 1,247 would be exceeded this year.

Campaign headquarters are in the Ohio Fuel Gas company offices.

SWEPT ASHORE

Ice Fishermen Reach Land With 21 Still Believed Missing.

SKANEE, Mich. —(U.P.)— Heavy waves which prevented a coast guard search for at least a score of ice fishermen cast adrift on a huge ice floe in Lake Superior swept seven of them ashore today.

Coast guardsmen estimated there still were about 21 persons missing on the storm-tossed waters, 13 on a huge floe which broke from off Skanee and 8 on the floe which broke from near Munising.

Speech Lines Up Forces for All-Out Aid

Supporters Firm Against Reduction After Talk By President.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, disclosed today that the seven billion dollar British aid program plus defense contracts yet to be awarded would require a 60 percent increase in American industrial activity.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — President Roosevelt's call for the most urgent all-out national effort in the lease-lend program lined up administration forces solidly today against any attempts to cut the $7,000,000,000 fund asked to provide the implements of war for embattled "democracies."

In the light of Mr. Roosevelt's words, the huge appropriations bill represented positive proof that there would be no turning back in the lease-lend policy, and for that psychological reason alone supporters were determined to win the speediest possible approval for every cent requested.

Avowed opposition to voting the full $7,000,000,000 has been lacking in the house, where debate on the measure starts tomorrow with its approval expected by Wednesday. Some senators, however, have questioned the need for so much money immediately.

Senator Nye (R.-N. D.), commenting on the president's Saturday night speech, said he saw nothing in it to justify the projected multi-billion dollar outlay for arms and supplies. Nye said he would seek to have the appropriations request sliced in half.

Chairman Glass (D.-Va.) said, however, that he would fight to defeat any such effort.

Meanwhile, the great machinery of the lease-lend program was already in action. The first shipments of materiel, as President Roosevelt announced, already were on their way to

PLANS REBUTTAL

Willkie Considers Tour To Refute Wheeler Talks.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Wendell L. Willkie, determined to fight against what he considers American "isolationism," is thinking of following Senator Wheeler from city to city if the Montana Democrat conducts a country-wide speaking campaign in opposition to administration foreign policy.

Wheeler has said he would travel from "Boston to San Francisco" to speak against American involvement in war and against the administration's conduct of foreign policy. He has predicted that other senators would join him in such a "crusade," as he terms it.

Friends of Willkie said today that if Wheeler and like-minded colleagues should make such a campaign, the 1940 Republican presidential nominee would like to "speak in rebuttal."

22 KILLED IN OHIO ACCIDENTS

Richland County Free of Fatal Crashes Over Week-End . Boy, 13, Hit By Auto.

Death on the highway struck down at least 22 persons in Ohio during the week-end but Richland county escaped with only one serious accident.

Arthur Liggett, 13, of Mansfield, R. D. 2, suffered a possible skull fracture and severe cuts and bruises when struck by an auto driven by Erlene V. Morris, 15, of 75 Pennsylvania avenue, yesterday at 3:40 p. m., four miles northeast of the city on Route 42.

A frequent visitor of Mansfield, Miss Eleanor J. Bauman, 45 of Toledo, sister of James Bauman of McPherson street, was burned to death Saturday afternoon when the auto in which she was riding caught fire after a collision on Route 20, five miles east of Toledo.

Miss Bauman was employed at a Toledo bank. She visited her brother here many times since he took up residence about a year ago.

Miss Morris told state highway patrolmen investigating the accident on Route 42 that she was unable to see the Liggett boy until it was too late to stop. She CLEVELAND—(AP)—Fire swept through the walls of a three-story brick apartment building at 1734 E. 18th street—within 500 feet of Central Police station — today. Thirty five occupants were forced to flee their rooms.

Firemen said the blaze started in the furnace room.

Hitch-Hiking Family of 8 Stranded Here By Cold

Job Hunting Transients Get Shelter In Mansfield After Walking Nearly 18 Miles In Gale.

Arriving half-frozen in the bitter gale that sent the thermometer down to 30 degrees Sunday evening a family of eight, father, mother and their six children, hailing from Salem, Mass., today had food, warmth and shelter at the Salvation Army.

Today, the father Charles Koston, 45, a painter by occupation, but willing to do any kind of labor, was out at 6:30 a. m. looking for a job. "If I get one, we'll stay here," he said hopefully. "If not, we'll just keep moving on until one looms up."

Thinly clad, their shoes unprotected by either galoshes or rubbers, the Koston family had left Akron Saturday morning after being housed by the Salvation Army there the night before.

With money given them by the Akron Army, Koston said, the family rode on a bus as far as Jeromesville where they rented a cabin for the night. Sunday morning they started out again.

"Because most people," Koston said, "mistook us for farmers living in the neighborhood, it was hard to get rides. We were picked up a couple of times, though, to ride short distances."

He estimated that the family walked most of the 18 miles to Mansfield.

"I wanted to come here," he said, "because I heard there was work to be had."

On these hitch-hiking trips, Mrs. Koston, 30, carries two-year old Barbara Mary, while 10-year-old Eleanor totes the baby, William.

IN 1-A CLASS

Greenberg Made Available For Army Service Despite Report.

DETROIT—(INS)—Hank Greenberg, home run king of the American league and stellar outfielder for the Detroit Tigers, has been placed in class 1A by his Detroit draft board, it was announced today, despite receipt of a report from a Florida draft doctor who examined the baseball player and declared him unfit for military service because of flat feet.

Hank's case, it was announced by Ben O. Shepherd, chairman of his draft board, will be referred to a medical advisory board. The Florida doctor, Grover C. Freeman, recommended that Hank be placed in class 1B which would make him available for limited military service.

Should the advisory board find Greenberg fit for service, he probably would be called up early next month as his number is 621.

Mansfield Wears Green In Honor Of St. Patrick

Mansfield's coldest St. Patrick's day in 15 years today chilled the plans of any would-be celebrants and limited celebrations to the customary "wearin' of the green."

Not many overcoat collars were opened on the street, but when they were they revealed green ties and pins and an occasional green scarf in recognition of the biggest Irish holiday of the year.

Since Mansfield has no Irish organization, there was no St. Patrick's day program scheduled in the city.

The Knights of Columbus, however, will not let St. Patrick's day pass without some recognition of the Irish patron saint. The lodge will hold a party Thursday night in its clubrooms, paying special attention to St. Patrick's customs.

The bitter cold throughout the state brought out more earmuffs than top hats in the larger cities and parades were cut short if they were held at all.

COLD STRANDS 1,000 DRIVERS ON ROADS HERE

Mercury Drops 30 Degrees To Low of Four Above Zero; Streets Ice-Coated.

40 FREEZE TO DEATH

Death Toll In West High as Gale Strikes; 30 Fishermen Believed Lost.

Mansfielders today bucked stinging wintry gales that brought one of the coldest St. Patrick's days on record and claimed at least 52 lives throughout the middle west.

Changing rain to snow and dropping the mercury 30 degrees in a few hours, the cold blast coated highways with ice and snow and created the worst traffic tie-up of the winter in the Mansfield area. Snow was only an inch deep here, but it mixed with rain and quickly formed ice.

Snow began falling in Mansfield at 5:30 p. m. Sunday and by midnight state highway patrolmen estimated that nearly 1,000 cars and trucks were stalled on hills from Mansfield south on route 42 to the roadside park below Lexington.

A low of four degrees above zero was recorded this morning in Mansfield. The reading late yesterday afternoon was 40 above. The cold was harder to bear because of the northwest gale which swept it across the state.

The biting cold struck with a suddenness that caught Ohio and other middle western states unprepared. Hundreds of motorists were stranded in snowdrifts in Minnesota, Wisconsin, and the Dakotas, approximately 40 of them freezing to death before help could reach them.

Coast guardsmen today sought 20 fishermen who were believed to have perished on an ice floe in Lake Superior. Whipped by a 60-mile wind, waves on the lake were 25 feet high, thwarting rescue attempts.

The bitter cold is due to stay

PREDICTS PEACE

Labor Spokesman Sees End of Wright Field Strike Soon.

DAYTON—(U.P.)—An authoritative spokesman for the Dayton Building Trades council (AFL) predicted that peace terms originating in Washington would terminate the Wright field construction strike "within a few days."

His statement was the first indication from any source of a break in the deadlock which has tied up virtually all work on a $1,550,000 expansion program at the army air corps testing field since March 4.

The Dayton labor spokesman, who declined to be quoted by name, said he was unable to state the probable terms of settlement and the news will develop from Washington.

SEES DELAY

Sours Says Projects May Be Held Up as 75 Engineers Leave Jobs.

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Many Ohio highway projects scheduled for this year may be held up for some time because of a shortage of planning, construction, and designing engineers in the highway department, Highway Director Hal G. Sours said today.

He revealed that his department has lost about 75 engineers in the last three months, some to military service, and others to private industry, where they receive "salaries beyond our ability to pay."

IRISH LICKED

Parade Plans In Cleveland Are Knocked Out By Blizzard.

CLEVELAND — (INS) — The weatherman dealt Cleveland's Irish a knockout blow today in the form of a blizzard and the annual St. Patrick's day parade was called off by John J. O'Malley, chairman of the Irish Civic association.

His announcement followed decision of several bands not to march because of the blustery weather and slippery condition of streets.

HULL ON VACATION

African Drive Frees Forces For New Front

Army Recaptures Berbera, Sealing Fate of Duce Empire; Greeks Get Big Reinforcements for Impending Nazi Attack

BULLETIN

ROME—(AP)—A reliable source said today Britain had warned Italy and Germany that RAF bombers would attack Rome if Axis planes bombed Athens.

(By United Press)

Smashing new successes in Italian East Africa today freed Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's hands for concentration on the big new Balkan war front where a German- British clash may develop at any time.

The new British blows virtually sealed the fate of Premier Benito Mussolini's entire East African empire and the British appeared to be within striking distance of forcing the remaining Fascist garrisons to surrender or continue fighting against nearly hopeless odds.

British troops, landed under the guns of the Royal navy and with Royal Air Force planes drumming overhead, recaptured Berbera, the Gulf of Aden port and capital of British Somaliland lost to the Italians last August 19.

At the same time the hardy British and Indian troops who have for several weeks held Keren, gateway to Asmara in Italian Eritrea under siege, captured strategic heights commanding the approach to the city.

These two developments underlined the hopeless odds against which the Fascist East African garrisons are fighting.

Berbera gives the British a good port only 160 miles from Djibouti, French Somaliland, the only possible means of egress for the Italians in Ethiopia. It is less than 250 miles from Diredawa and Harar, the southeastern Ethiopian strongholds toward which a British column which captured Italian Somaliland already is advancing.

From Berbera the British can launch and easily supply another column to cut northwest along the road used by the Italians to occupy British Somaliland. This road leads to Diredawa and Harar and if the British can take those positions they can cut the Addis Ababa - Djibouti railroad, making the final collapse of Italian resistance inevitable.

The coastal waters of Eritrea are already mined by the British so that the Italians are completely boxed in.

The British have powerfully reinforced their Greek allies for the COVINGTON, Ky.—(U.P.)—Harry Herman Fraser, 49, who was questioned in 1939 by police in connection with the still unsolved slaying of Miss Anna May Bishop in Covington, was shot to death today by an unidentified man who escaped.

Fraser, who lived next door to Miss Bishop, was shot as he walked along a street near his home.

Police said the slayer came from an alley and fired point blank at Fraser.

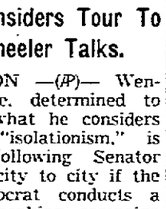
N-J Photog Carries Off Three Prizes In A. P. State Contest

(Pictures on Page 8)

Three News-Journal pictures, all made by Harold L. Valentine, staff photographer, won prizes in a picture contest at Columbus yesterday, staged by Associated Press editors, who held their annual convention there.



Valentine

Valentine's pictures took two first place awards and a third place.

His picture of the huge crowd at Elwood, Ind., last summer for the Wendell Willkie notification ceremony took first prize in spot news pictures used in a non-metropolitan Ohio Associated Press newspaper.

Valentine titled the picture Elwood's Biggest Day."

In the same classification, his picture of the fatal crash that cost the life of Theodore H. Boyd of Galion, showing Mr. Boyd in the car, won third prize.

In the special class, which included feature or human interest pictures, Valentine's shot of three persons wearing sun glasses and using newspaper as sunshades in the intense heat at the Elwood ceremonies won first prize. It was titled "Elwood Sunshine."

Valentine's prize-winning crowd picture was made from the belfry of a school building, and shows a veritable sea of people.

No other competing photographer won more than two prizes as compared with Valentine's three.

Valentine came to The News-Journal in October, 1939, from the Associated Press wirephoto bureau in Columbus. In that period, he has made thousands of news and feature pictures in and around Mansfield.

O.S.R. Fugitives Sat In Farm House Hour Before Kidnaping

An hour before three Ohio State reformatory fugitives broke from their hide-out Saturday and kidnaped a Mansfield motorist, they sat in a farmhouse south of Lucas and leisurely ate their suppers.

This was disclosed today by M. L. Switzer, Humphreys Manufacturing company maintenance foreman, at whose home on route 39 at the intersection of route 603, the trio made their appearance.

Posing as truck drivers whose vehicle had broken down, they apparently became frightened when Switzer returned home and fled toward Perrysville with the excuse that they were seeking assistance to repair their truck.

They turned up at the Switzer residence shortly before they abducted Harold Schmitke 21 of 78 South Foster street, on route 39, as he slowed up to cross a tem-

Legislature Ready to Consider Budget

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

IT'S about time, I think, that the First Ladies of Broadway exercised a little charm on the weather man and persuaded him, via goo-goo eyes or other glamorous allurements, not to celebrate their first nights with blizzard, hurricane or typhoon.

Poor Miss Gertrude Lawrence was beset, on the first scheduled opening date of "Lady in the Dark," by not only a touch of grippe but a sleet, hail and snow storm that would have sent a polar bear to Miami by the next plane; and the premiere of Miss Katharine Cornell's "The Doctor's Dilemma" was held in weather that would have drowned a duck, let alone Herbert Bayard Swope, Tommy Manville, Moss Hart and other first nighters.

Kilgallen.

It is nice to see John Boles at the Versailles, and to hear him sing there, for besides his pleasant voice he has a phenomenally un-hammy delivery that seems to delight the customers. I always thought Mr. Boles would forever remain for me just the fellow who plays nice, business-like husbands in the movies, but suddenly here he is on Broadway—or a stone's throw from it—standing right up there in the floor singing "The Desert Song," just as I always pictured him . . .

I am getting a little bored with military fashions for girls. I haven't seen a belle in weeks who wasn't wearing an eagle, a general's insignia or admiral's gold braid on her sleeve, hat, pocket, lapel or compact.

The poor lads in the army would slave for years to win as many gilt stripes as their girl friends can get with a dress. Isn't anything sacred?

I don't know what I was thinking of the other night at Fefe's Monte Carlo, but I forgot to ask Victor Mature to explain his shirt to me. Perhaps it is just that I am not up on masculine effects this week, but this shirt looked like a new thing to me.

It was worn with a dinner jacket, and it was made of soft white pique fashioned in ruffles. Not gathered ruffles, straight ruffles. And not vertical ruffles, horizontal ruffles.

I have been going along carefully observing the attire of Jock Whitney, Serge Obolensky, William Rhinelander Stewart and Oscar Levant, hoping to pick up a thing or two in the sartorial line, but these boys have not come through with anything sensational for a long time. It took Vic to come through.

I hope before I die I will get to attend a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Basil Rathbone. Must be something like the soirees tossed by Louis XIV . . .

On "Information Please" a week or so ago, the wits and savants were endeavoring to bring to mind the name of the daily column written by Damon Runyon. After several of the lads had taken a crack at it, Oscar Levant ventured confidently: "Speaking for Myself." See the top of this column, Osc. That's me . . .

I think the most sophisticated and arresting hair-do in cafe society are those worn by blond Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart and brunet Liz Whitney. Both like the parted-in-the-middle-pulled-straight-back variety that never seems dated, whether you are looking at it in a 19th Century portrait or on the dance floor at El Morocco. But you have to have classic features to get by with it.

One of the biggest problems of the Broadway sector is, I think, the problem of taxicabs for theatergoers. The scarcity of taxis in the side streets at 11 p. m. is, along with people who light matches near your tulle and those who stand on your feet to get a better look at Hope Hampton, one of the hazards of playgoing, and out of it has grown rather a neat little racket which may be within the law as Mr. Valentine sees it, and then again may not.

Under the present system, theater doormen and assorted other "runners" grab a cab at the end of the block, ride up to the theater on the running board and turn over the vehicle to the person who flashes the first quarter.

Now, this is all right; most people who pay $4.40 for a theater ticket have a quarter left over and figure it's worth it to get out of the rain, but there is another side to the procedure: I am informed by my taxi driver acquaintances that the cabbies have to pay a quarter to be allowed into the street.

This strikes me as unfair; there is not much profit in a 35-cent ride to the Beachcomber when the cabbie has already paid 25 cents for the privilege of making the haul.

It seems to me the cop on the corner would have very little trouble guessing how many cabs would be needed on W. 45 street to carry off theatergoers, and allowing that many—and only that many—to go in, free.

HOLLYWOOD

"A Girl, a Guy and a Gob." Screenplay by Frank Ryan and Bert Granet from story by Grover Jones. Directed by Richard Wallace. Principals: George Murphy, Lucille Ball, Edmond O'Brien, Henry Travers, Franklin Pangborn, George Cleveland, Kathleen Howard, Marguerite Chapman, Lloyd Corrigan.

HAROLD LLOYD sat on the sidelines, as producer, and does not once appear in this bright comedy. And yet his hand is clearly in evidence through scenes reminiscent of the bespectacled comic at his best.

The girl is Dot (Ball), a secretary living with her slightly wacky family. The "guy" is Stephen Herrick (O'Brien), her socialite employer, engaged to a domineering beauty of his own set and a bewildered candidate for a henpecked future.

The "gob" is Coffee Cup (Murphy), fresh from the fleet and all set to settle down with Dot, except that now and then he hears the siren call of tropical tunes and still cherishes a little black book with addresses in many ports.

From the portentous noontime when Steve wanders over to a street crowd where Dot and Coffee Cup are collecting wagers on the ability of one sailor Eddie to "grow" four inches, the rich boy is a candidate for henpeckery no longer. Knocked out in the ensuing riot (which builds in typical Lloyd style) he is revived at Dot's home where the usual bedlam is in progress; before the evening is out he has joined Dot and Coffee Cup in an eye-opening, unbending evening at a dime-a-dance hall, and has estranged his fiancee.

The picture's problem now is to change the romantic status of the principals without making heels of any of them, and it is nicely solved.

"The Lady Eve." Written and directed by Preston Sturges from story by Monckton Hoffe. Principals: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Melville Cooper.

This third of Sturges' directing jobs ("The Great McGinty," "Christmas in July") concerns the wealthy snake-fancier's shipboard romance with the card-sharp's daughter. A trusting, awkward Galahad, he is disillusioned when her business connections are revealed. Later at home he falls hard again when, for revenge, she appears as the Lady Eve of British nobility, sponsored by a phony lord (Blore).

Light comedy with frequent excursions into slapstick. "The Lady Eve" exercises anew the Sturges gift for satirizing the human foible.

SCORE CALLED AS WITNESSES IN MAIL FRAUD

Trial of 44 on Cemetery Lot Conspiracy Begins Tuesday In Federal Court.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Scores of witnesses were summoned today to testify in the federal court trial opening tomorrow of 44 men indicted on mail fraud and conspiracy charges in the sale of burial plots near Marion, Columbus and Springfield.

Court attaches estimated that six to eight weeks would be required to complete the cases of former officers and salesmen of Forest Glen, Inc., of Marion, whom U. S. Attorney Calvin Crawford said fradulently promised returns of 25 to 100 per cent on approximately $3,000,000 worth of cemetery lots sold from November, 1933, to May, 1938. A jury is to be selected tomorrow.

The indictments, returned last December, were described by Crawford as a "declaration of war on behalf of the helpless and unwary."

Crawford identified Robert Marshall of Marion as the "number one man—the brains and works of the whole scheme." Marshall was vice president of Forest Glen, which functioned as sales agent for Forest Glen cemetery at Marion, Glen Haven at Springfield and Glen Rest at Columbus.

John W. Jacoby of Marion, former head of the state real estate licensing board, was named as president, while 40 of those indicted were classed as salesmen. Judge Robert R. Nevin of Dayton, assigned to the trial, received pleas of innocent from all defendants, but denied applications for separate trials because of the conspiracy count in the indictment.

SELL HOLDINGS TO BUY ARMS

British Dispose of 125 Million Dollar Viscose Plant; Plan Other Sales.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Sir Edward Peacock, special British treasury representative in the United States, who yesterday announced completion of arrangements for the sale of the $125,000,000 British-owned American Viscose Corporation to 17 American banking firms, today disclosed that Great Britain is planning to dispose of other large holdings to raise additional American dollars for arms and munitions purchases.

Through the sale of the Viscose corporation, the greatest manufacturer of rayons in the United States, Sir Edward unloaded the largest single property in the $900,000,000 of British direct investments in this country which he came to America 18 months ago to sell.

The 17 banking firms, headed by Messrs. Morgan Stanley and company and Dillon Read and company, will give $40,000,000 as a down payment to Britain immediately. Aditional payments will be made later out of the proceeds realized from the sale of American Viscose corporation shares to American investors.

American Viscose plants are concentrated in the east in Lewistown, Meadville and Marcus Hook, Pa., Parkersburg and Nitro, W. Va., and Roanoke and Front Royal, Va., and employ an estimated 18,000 persons.

Laff-a-Day

"Why, this isn't so bad! We don't have to commute!"

Forced to find new quarters last fall when selective service headquarters were set up at the courthouse, the county grand jury found another home today in the common pleas courtroom. During their last session, the jurors were in the common pleas jury room but it was so small that it was difficult to call in witnesses without confusion. Draft Board 3 is in the court of appeals room which has been used for several years for grand jury sessions.

It was a former Mansfielder who planned the recent Milwaukee composers' concert arranged by the Seven Arts society there. She is Mrs. George A. Neuman, who before her marriage was Miss Agatha Reynolds. As its name suggests, the concert featured numbers by Milwaukee music writers. Mrs. Neuman was the soprano soloist. She has also made a number of recordings of numbers composed by Milwaukeeans and has sent some of them to Miss Florence MacDonald, Mansfield, who was solely responsible for her voice training. Mrs. Neuman left Mansfield nearly ten years ago but has returned for frequent visits and for further coaching with her girlhood teacher. . . . . .

Richard Beilstein, first violin in the all-city school symphony, can blame a shower bath for his failure to appear in the northern section music preliminary contests held Saturday at John Simpson junior high school. Friday night, he slipped and fell in a shower at the school and was unable to take part in the competition. He was scheduled to appear in a solo and also with George Porterfield in a duet. Ada Mae Harbaugh, who won a vocal award in high school when she graduated in January, won second place in the vocal soprano solo contest for students with more than high school training. Her name was omitted from the list of winners published yesterday.

Finney Says WPA Supplies Enough For County Projects.

J. V. Finney, relief director, announced today that there was little danger that Richland county's work relief program would be curtailed or projects suspended because of a lack of workers.

Last week, J. L. Kelly, manager of the Central Ohio WPA district, said that the WPA waiting assignment list for this county had been exhausted and that the relief programs might have to be curtailed to meet the existing labor and possibly some projects dropped unless additional certifications were received from the county relief office.

Finney announced that although private industry spurred on by national defense contracts has absorbed a good deal of relief workers, he still had 125 on his WPA waiting assignment list.

ADJOURNMENT BY MIDDLE OF MAY PREDICTED

Debate Expected To Consume Six Weeks; Cities Fight For More Revenue.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—With hearings on the Bricker administration's general appropriations bill scheduled to begin this week, predictions were made in Columbus today that the 94th general assembly will be ready to wind up its affairs by mid-May.

Legislative leaders said hearings on the budget bill will consume approximately six weeks, with its ultimate adoption assured by the Republican majorities in both houses.

Big cities, meanwhile, marshalled their forces today for the long-deferred show-down on the administration's distribution of sales tax revenues for 1941-42. Administration spokesmen indicated that the Knepper bill, appropriating $12,000,000 a year to the subdivisions, will be permitted to come up for a vote in the senate, probably tomorrow, if all 19 Republican senators are present.

The bill was reported favorably by the Republican-controlled senate finance committee 10 days ago, but was held up when it developed that the position of two or more Republican senators was in doubt.

Powerful pressure was brought to bear over the week-end on senators with big city constituencies in an effort to induce them to join the Democratic minority of 17 in their demand that a larger share of the tax funds go to the municipalities.

Test votes on other measures last week, however, such as on the bill to extend the liquid fuel tax for two years, and the vote on a minority report to substitute a $17,000,000 figure for the $12,000,000 set up in the Knepper bill, found the Republicans standing solidly together. Sen. Frank E. Whittemore (R.-Akron) majority leader, expressed confidence Republican ranks would not waver when the controversial legislation is brought to the floor of the senate this week.

Democrats cite an increase of about $1,000,000 in sales tax receipts so far this year, over the same period of 1940, as justification for a $5,000,000 boost in the $12,000,000 appropriation, and assert that the administration has purposely underestimated revenues by from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 in order to build up a surplus that can be used as a Republican "war chest" to reduce taxes in 1942.

Protesting that the administration's refusal to share increased receipts with the subdivisions at this time will result in higher real estate taxes, opposition spokesmen are arguing that the sales tax was enacted originally for the benefit of local governments and school districts on a 60-40 basis to replace revenues lost because of the passage of the 10-mill limitation.

The administration set the allotment at $12,000,000 a year in 1939 and 1940, and now takes the stand that the same amount will suffice in each year of the current biennium.

Passage of another major financial measure originating with the administration appeared in doubt today when a threat was made to submit a constitutional amendment to prohibit diversion of gasoline and auto license tag funds from highway purposes.

Roland C. Caley, executive secretary of the Ohio roads federation, said the move was being considered in case the legislature passes the Whittemore bill to divert license tag funds to the general operating funds of cities and counties.

THE SMOKE'S THE THING!

YES, when you smoke the slower-burning cigarette...Camel... you have the pleasing assurance of modern laboratory science that you're getting less nicotine in the smoke.

Not only extra freedom from nicotine—but other important extras as well—extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor, too, for Camel's slower way of burning means freedom from flavor-dulling excess heat and the irritating qualities of too-fast burning.

There's economy in Camels, too—extra smoking per pack.

And by the carton, Camels are even more economical.

Try slower-burning Camels. Compare them by smoking them. For, in a cigarette, the smoke's the thing—and Camel's the smoke!

Legislature Ready to Consider Budget

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking for Myself.

IT'S about time, I think, that the First Ladies of Broadway exercised a little charm on the weather man and persuaded him, via goo-goo eyes or other glamorous allurements, not to celebrate their first nights with blizzard, hurricane or typhoon.

Poor Miss Gertrude Lawrence was beset, on the first scheduled opening date of "Lady in the Dark," by not only a touch of grippe but a sleet, hail and snow storm that would have sent a polar bear to Miami by the next plane; and the premiere of Miss Katharine Cornell's "The Doctor's Dilemma" was held in weather that would have drowned a duck, let alone Herbert Bayard Swope, Tommy Manville, Moss Hart and other first nighters.

Kilgallen.

It is nice to see John Boles at the Versailles, and to hear him sing there, for besides his pleasant voice he has a phenomenally un-hammy delivery that seems to delight the customers. I always thought Mr. Boles would forever remain for me just the fellow who plays nice, business-like husbands in the movies, but suddenly here he is on Broadway—or a stone's throw from it—standing right up there in the floor singing "The Desert Song," just as I always pictured him . . .

I am getting a little bored with military fashions for girls. I haven't seen a belle in weeks who wasn't wearing an cagle, a general's insignia or admiral's gold braid on her sleeve, hat, pocket, lapel or compact.

The poor lads in the army would slave for years to win as many gilt stripes as their girl friends can get with a dress. Isn't anything sacred?

I don't know what I was thinking of the other night at Fefe's Monte Carlo, but I forgot to ask Victor Mature to explain his shirt to me. Perhaps it is just that I am not up on masculine effects this week, but this shirt looked like a new thing to me.

It was worn with a dinner jacket, and it was made of soft white pique fashioned in ruffles. Not gathered ruffles, straight ruffles. And not vertical ruffles, horizontal ruffles.

I have been going along carefully observing the attire of Jock Whitney, Serge Obolensky, William Rhinelander Stewart and Oscar Levant, hoping to pick up a thing or two in the sartorial line, but these boys have not come through with anything sensational for a long time. It took Vic to come through.

I hope before I die I will get to attend a party given by Mr. and Mrs. Basil Rathbone. Must be something like the soirees tossed by Louis XIV . . .

On "Information Please" a week or so ago, the wits and savants were endeavoring to bring to mind the name of the daily column written by Damon Runyon. After several of the lads had taken a crack at it, Oscar Levant ventured confidently: "Speaking for Myself." See the top of this column, Osc. That's me . . .

I think the most sophisticated and arresting hair-do in cafe society are those worn by blond Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart and brunet Liz Whitney. Both like the parted-in-the-middle-pulled-straight-back variety that never seems dated, whether you are looking at it in a 19th Century portrait or on the dance floor at El Morocco. But you have to have classic features to get by with it.

One of the biggest problems of the Broadway sector is, I think, the problem of taxicabs for theatergoers. The scarcity of taxis in the side streets at 11 p. m. is, along with people who light matches near your tulle and those who stand on your feet to get a better look at Hope Hampton, one of the hazards of playgoing, and out of it has grown rather a neat little racket which may be within the law as Mr. Valentine sees it, and then again may not.

Under the present system, theater doormen and assorted other "runners" grab a cab at the end of the block, ride up to the theater on the running board and turn over the vehicle to the person who flashes the first quarter.

Now, this is all right; most people who pay $4.40 for a theater ticket have a quarter left over and figure it's worth it to get out of the rain, but there is another side to the procedure: I am informed by my taxi driver acquaintances that the cabbies have to pay a quarter to be allowed into the street.

This strikes me as unfair; there is not much profit in a 35-cent ride to the Beachcomber when the cabbie has already paid 25 cents for the privilege of making the haul.

It seems to me the cop on the corner would have very little trouble guessing how many cabs would be needed on W. 45 street to carry off theatergoers, and allowing that many—and only that many—to go in, free.

I've never seen George S. Kaufman smile . . . I love that new song "But Look at Me Now" . . . I think papaya is the fruit with the most romantic name—because it grows in such romantic places—but the most awful taste .

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

"A Girl, a Guy and a Gob." Screenplay by Frank Ryan and Bert Granet from story by Grover Jones. Directed by Richard Wallace. Principals: George Murphy, Lucille Ball, Edmond O'Brien, Henry Travers, Franklin Pangborn, George Cleveland, Kathleen Howard, Marguerite Chapman, Lloyd Corrigan.

HAROLD LLOYD sat on the sidelines, as producer, and does not once appear in this bright comedy. And yet his hand is clearly in evidence through scenes reminiscent of the bespectacled comic at his best.

The girl is Dot (Ball), a secretary living with her slightly wacky family. The "guy" is Stephen Herrick (O'Brien), her socialite employer, engaged to a domineering beauty of his own set and a bewildered candidate for a henpecked future.

The "gob" is Coffee Cup (Murphy), fresh from the fleet and all set to settle down with Dot, except that now and then he hears the siren call of tropical tunes and still cherishes a little black book with addresses in many ports.

From the portentous noontime when Steve wanders over to a street crowd where Dot and Coffee Cup are collecting wagers on the ability of one sailor Eddie to "grow" four inches, the rich boy is a candidate for henpeckery no longer. Knocked out in the ensuing riot (which builds in typical Lloyd style) he is revived at Dot's home where the usual bedlam is in progress; before the evening is out he has joined Dot and Coffee Cup in an eye-opening, unbending evening at a dime-a-dance hall, and has estranged his fiancee.

The picture's problem now is to change the romantic status of the principals without making heels of any of them, and it is nicely solved.

"The Lady Eve." Written and directed by Preston Sturges from story by Monckton Hoffe. Principals: Barbara Stanwyck, Henry Fonda, Charles Coburn, Eugene Pallette, William Demarest, Eric Blore, Melville Cooper.

This third of Sturges' directing jobs ("The Great McGinty," "Christmas in July") concerns the wealthy snake-fancier's shipboard romance with the card-sharp's daughter. A trusting, awkward Galahad, he is disillusioned when her business connections are revealed. Later at home he falls hard again when, for revenge, she appears as the Lady Eve of British nobility, sponsored by a phony lord (Blore).

Light comedy with frequent excursions into slapstick. "The Lady Eve" exercises anew the Sturges gift for satirizing the human foible.

SCORE CALLED AS WITNESSES IN MAIL FRAUD

Trial of 44 on Cemetery Lot Conspiracy Begins Tuesday In Federal Court.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Scores of witnesses were summoned today to testify in the federal court trial opening tomorrow of 44 men indicted on mail fraud and conspiracy charges in the sale of burial plots near Marion, Columbus and Springfield.

Court attaches estimated that six to eight weeks would be required to complete the cases of former officers and salesmen of Forest Glen, Inc., of Marion, whom U. S. Attorney Calvin Crawford said fradulently promised returns of 25 to 100 per cent on approximately $3,000,000 worth of cemetery lots sold from November, 1933, to May, 1938. A jury is to be selected tomorrow.

The indictments, returned last December, were described by Crawford as a "declaration of war on behalf of the helpless and unwary."

Crawford identified Robert Marshall of Marion as the "number one man—the brains and works of the whole scheme." Marshall was vice president of Forest Glen, which functioned as sales agent for Forest Glen cemetery at Marion, Glen Haven at Springfield and Glen Rest at Columbus.

John W. Jacoby of Marion, former head of the state real estate licensing board, was named as president, while 40 of those indicted were classed as salesmen. Judge Robert R. Nevin of Dayton, assigned to the trial, received pleas of innocent from all defendants, but denied applications for separate trials because of the conspiracy count in the indictment.

Up and Down the Street

Forced to find new quarters last fall when selective service headquarters were set up at the courthouse, the county grand jury found another home today in the common pleas courtroom. During their last session, the jurors were in the common pleas jury room but it was so small that it was difficult to call in witnesses without confusion. Draft Board 3 is in the court of appeals room which has been used for several years for grand jury sessions.

It was a former Mansfielder who planned the recent Milwaukee composers' concert arranged by the Seven Arts society there. She is Mrs. George A. Neuman, who before her marriage was Miss Agatha Reynolds. As its name suggests, the concert featured numbers by Milwaukee music writers. Mrs. Neuman was the soprano soloist. She has also made a number of recordings of numbers composed by Milwaukeeans and has sent some of them to Miss Florence MacDonald, Mansfield, who was solely responsible for her voice training. Mrs. Neuman left Mansfield nearly ten years ago but has returned for frequent visits and for further coaching with her girlhood teacher. . . . . .

Her name was omitted from the list of winners published yesterday.

NO SHORTAGE

Finney Says WPA Supplies Enough For County Projects.

J. V. Finney, relief director, announced today that there was little danger that Richland county's work relief program would be curtailed or projects suspended because of a lack of workers.

Last week, J. L. Kelly, manager of the Central Ohio WPA district, said that the WPA waiting assignment list for this county had been exhausted and that the relief programs might have to be curtailed to meet the existing labor and possibly some projects dropped unless additional certifications were received from the county relief office.

Finney announced that although private industry spurred on by national defense contracts has absorbed a good deal of relief workers, he still had 125 on his WPA waiting assignment list.

ADJOURNMENT BY MIDDLE OF MAY PREDICTED

Debate Expected To Consume Six Weeks; Cities Fight For More Revenue.

(By International News Service)

COLUMBUS—With hearings on the Bricker administration's general appropriations bill scheduled to begin this week, predictions were made in Columbus today that the 94th general assembly will be ready to wind up its affairs by mid-May.

Legislative leaders said hearings on the budget bill will consume approximately six weeks, with its ultimate adoption assured by the Republican majorities in both houses.

Big cities, meanwhile, marshalled their forces today for the long-deferred show-down on the administration's distribution of sales tax revenues for 1941-42. Administration spokesmen indicated that the Knepper bill, appropriating $12,000,000 a year to the subdivisions, will be permitted to come up for a vote in the senate, probably tomorrow, if all 19 Republican senators are present.

The bill was reported favorably by the Republican-controlled senate finance committee 10 days ago, but was held up when it developed that the position of two or more Republican senators was in doubt.

Powerful pressure was brought to bear over the week-end on senators with big city constituencies in an effort to induce them to join the Democratic minority of 17 in their demand that a larger share of the tax funds go to the municipalities.

Test votes on other measures last week, however, such as on the bill to extend the liquid fuel tax for two years, and the vote on a minority report to substitute a $17,000,000 figure for the $12,000,000 set up in the Knepper bill, found the Republicans standing solidly together. Sen. Frank E. Whittemore (R.-Akron) majority leader, expressed confidence Republican ranks would not waver when the controversial legislation is brought to the floor of the senate this week.

Democrats cite an increase of about $1,000,000 in sales tax receipts so far this year, over the same period of 1940, as justification for a $5,000,000 boost in the $12,000,000 appropriation, and assert that the administration has purposely underestimated revenues by from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 in order to build up a surplus that can be used as a Republican "war chest" to reduce taxes in 1942.

Protesting that the administration's refusal to share increased receipts with the subdivisions at this time will result in higher real estate taxes, opposition spokesmen are arguing that the sales tax was enacted originally for the benefit of local governments and school districts on a 60-40 basis to replace revenues lost because of the passage of the 10-mill limitation.

The administration set the allotment at $12,000,000 a year in 1939 and 1940, and now takes the stand that the same amount will suffice in each year of the current biennium.

Passage of another major financial measure originating with the administration appeared in doubt today when a threat was made to submit a constitutional amendment to prohibit diversion of gasoline and auto license tag funds from highway purposes.

Roland C. Caley, executive secretary of the Ohio roads federation, said the move was being considered in case the legislature passes the Whittemore bill to divert license tag funds to the general operating funds of cities and counties.

I try to tell the other guys in this office that if they'd run their pictures in the paper day after day, THEY TOO could be popular at the post-office.

Comes a note from Mrs. R. A. Greene, 600 Marion avenue, wondering if the sportsmen would be interested to know that the widow of her cousin, the late Charles (C. C. Cash and Carry) Pyle, is playing the role of Cobina on the Bob Hope program.

Among the ambitious young rookies who'll try out for jobs with the Mansfield Braves this spring is Charles Lawrence, first sacker from Newark, who towers six feet, nine inches into the stratosphere.

The youngster should have no difficulty spearing high heaves from here to there, but whether he can bend clear down there in time to snag a hot grass cutter is a question the answer to which the Braves are waiting with bated (not baited) breath.

Lawrence has one item in his favor. The Braves needn't worry about his being drafted. He stretches way and beyond the top limit placed by Uncle Sam on the height of his armed forces.

It's too bad big fellows like Lawrence can't get in the army. There is one guy who could be in the air corps without ever leaving the ground

Grover Hartley has decided to keep his Ohio State league franchise in Findlay after all. The former big league catcher took the deciding step, and sank Marion's hopes of winning a league berth, when he named Leo F. Urschalitz, Findlay bank teller, as business manager of the club for the coming season.

Hartley, who owns the Findlay club, lock, stock and barrel, has been quoted as saying a barrel is what he'll need if the Findlay gate fails to rise above its low level of last season.

A barrel to walk home in, and not for gate receipts storage.

Blue Goose Meets Marion

Visitors Boast All-Star Lineup For Tilt Tonight.

Blue Goose Sohioans will meet an all-star aggregation tonight when they tangle with Ralph's Snappy Service bucketball team of Marion at 7:30 in a preliminary game to the second-half City A league championship tilt between Mansfield Athletic Supply and Ohio Seamless Tube at the high school gym.

The service club won its city championship last year and is leading the Marion league race again this season, and has a record of 32 victories against two defeats.

The lineup includes George Conway of Ohio Northern, Bill Evans of Case, Joe and Chuck Green, brothers who hold down the guard posts, Slim Bogner, six-foot, two-and-one-half-inch center, and Nicky Farron, high scoring forward.

In one game last year Farron hit the hoop for 64 points, which would be a season's total for some cagers.

Should the Athletics win the main fracas tonight, they'll have the second-half title tucked away. But if the Shelby quintet wins, another game would be necessary under the tournament plan which calls for two defeats for elimination.

Two Records Set In Meet

Shot Put and Hurdle Marks Fall Sunday.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—A carefree husky from Georgetown university and a serious-looking Detroit speedster today carried two world records out of Cleveland, fruits of spectacular performances in the first annual Knights of Columbus indoor meet here.

Al Blozis, the eastern record-cracking weight star, gave the 16-pound shot one mighty heave of 56 feet 4½ inches to eclipse his own mark of 56 feet 2¾ inches.

Allan Tolmich, the former Wayne university hurdler, set aside a record that has withstood the world's best timber-toppers for 40 years by scamping over the 45-yard lows in 5.4 seconds. The old mark of 5.6 seconds was established by F. B. Scheuber in Boston on March 16, 1901.

Tolmich also sped over the 45-yard highs in 5.7 seconds to tie a four-year record set by Sam Allen in Boston.

The Columbian two-mile, feature race of the meet, drew one of the season's best fields but Notre Dame's indefatigable Greg Rice coasted home in 8.589 for his 18th consecutive victory.

Walter Mehl of Wisconsin captured the mile in the sluggish time of 4.14 but Charley Beetham of Ohio State finished strong to shade two-miler Jim Herbert of New York City in a 1,125 600-yard run.

Redlegs Lack Hitting Power

McKechnie Books Long Drill With Stick.

TAMPA, Fla.—(UP)—Manager Bill McKechnie of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds had a long batting drill scheduled today for his charges to work on a familiar problem with the Reds—lack of hitting.

The Reds made only two hits against the New York Yankees Saturday and went runless. Yesterday against the Boston Red Sox they collected 10 safeties but failed to hit in the pinches to leave 10 runners stranded as they lost, 5 to 1.

Red Sox power told the story. Joe Cronin's men hit safely 10 times but six blows went for extra bases including a home run, two triples and three doubles. Only two of the Reds' hits were good for extra bases—doubles by Bill Werber and Bobby Mattick.

The Reds escaped a second straight shutout when Harry Craft singled in the fourth inning and continued all the way around the bases when Outfielder Ted Williams made a three-base error on the play.

Bucky Walters, Monte Pearson and Junior Thompson hurled for the Reds. Walters was in midseason form as he blanked the Sox for the first three innings. Bucky gave up two hits, faced only 11 batters and didn't issue a base on balls.

The Reds return to action tomorrow when they face the Detroit Tigers, their world series foes of last year. Whitey Moore is scheduled to open against the 1940 American league winners.

A. B. C. Keeps Up High Scoring

ST. PAUL, Minn.—(UP)—High scores were maintained during the week-end in the 41st annual American Bowling Congress competition, establishing a new five-man team leader and revising second place standings in the doubles and singles.

The Grubaugh Funeral Homes team of Detroit rolled 2,829 to take first place above the Milwaukee Schlitz Brown Bottles who last week turned in a 2,826 score.

Jim Berado, Chicago clerk, scored the third 700 series in the singles to take second place in that event with 711 and also took second place in the all-events with 1,913.

The team of Russell Henry and Charles Woods of Detroit moved into second place in the doubles standings when they knocked off 1,265. Woods rolled 695 and Henry 570. The team had scores of 383, 453 and 429.

HOMER BEATS DIZ

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Bob Johnson of the Philadelphia Athletics hopes he has regained his batting eye. The veteran outfielder had made only one hit in six games but yesterday he helped beat the Cubs with a two-run homer against Dizzy Dean.

Rookie Cheers Cards

Young Hurler Turns In Four Winning Efforts.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

The brightest jewel uncovered in baseball's spring training so far is John Grodzicki, 24-year-old righthander who will make everybody in the National League remember his name if the St. Louis Cardinals don't work him to death before the season opens.

* * *

Although the Cardinals carted 20 pitchers to camp, this unheralded rookie from Nanticoke, Pa., has appeared in four games in 10 days—and these have been the only games the Redbirds won.

Grodzicki was named by Manager Billy Southworth as the starting pitcher in the first game the club played in the Grapefruit league and held the New York Yankees hitless for three innings. That was March 7. On March 12 he worked another hitless three-inning span against the world Champion Cincinnati Reds.

The next day he was called out of the bull pen in the ninth inning when Cleveland had loaded the bases with nobody out—and stopped the Indians dead. Yesterday, after two days rest, he hurled the full nine innings against the Yankees and beat them 6-5 on six hits.

Although unknown to most fans till now, Grodzicki has been in the Cardinal chain gang since 1936 and might have made the big step last year except that he was injured at training camp. Possibly because of this, he was a very ordinary pitcher for Rochester in the International league last year. He looks ripe this spring.

While St. Louis has been starring one individual, other clubs have compiled brighter records by splitting up the work.

The Chicago White Sox have gone undefeated in three games and the Philadelphia Athletics have won eight out of nine to give the Grapefruit league to the western, or Pacific Coast, division.

The Brooklyn Dodgers lost their share of the lead last week by splitting their squad, sending one unit to Miami to battle the New York Giants and keeping a gang in Havana to play the Cuban All-Stars. Neither division was successful. The Giants were hot and won five straight games from assorted opposition during the week as did Connie Mack's Athletics.

On the batting side, Joe Orengo of the Giants and Sam Chapman of the A's have been the big boom-booms. Orengo hit three homers over the week-end, and Chapman, who already had been hot, homered with the bases loaded against the Cubs yesterday.

Bob Feller, it might be worthy to note, has yielded seven runs in the six innings he has worked for Cleveland and the only thing cushioning the Indians from the Grapefruit league cellar is Jimmy Wilson's yet-to-win Chicago club.

Class B contests open in the Ohio State university gymnasium but move Friday to the State Fairgrounds Coliseum where all Class A games are scheduled for the meet ending Saturday.

The 16 Class A qualifiers are all that remain of 256 teams seeking to participate in the annual scholastic classic while the 16 Class B quintets are survivors of a field of 911 in the minor league.

New Philadelphia, 1940 Class A champion, and New Carlisle, Class B titlist, both fell by the wayside in early rounds, leaving a wide open field for this year's laurels.

The qualifiers:

Mrs. Maxton entered the last event of the five-week-old tourney as just another bowler. Then she rolled 634 in the Class A singles, bettering by 24 pins the previous total set by Catherine Burling of Cincinnati. The big series also gave Mrs. Maxton the Class A all-events with 1723—ahead of Marge Slogar of Cleveland by 37 sticks.

Other keglers rolling their way to places in the various events last night included:

Mae Steyer and Bea Cranston of Norwalk, 1087, second in Class B doubles;

M. E. Koshash and B. Kosash of Lorain, 1042, third in Class D doubles;

Lucille Allison of Tiffin, 1555, second; and E. Koshash of Lorain, 1527, tied for fifth, in Class B all-events.

Confident They'll Cop Flag

Rivals Point To Gloom Left From Vitt Row.

By GAYLE TALBOT

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(AP)—It may be taken for granted that the Cleveland Indians are the best balanced club in the American league, with great pitching, fine defense and potentially a world of power at bat.

What cannot be measured, however, is their ability to shake off the memory of the championship they threw away in the closing weeks of the 1940 race. A couple of rival club managers have doubted, in confidence, that the Indians will perform up to their strength, and they are more worried about the rising Yankee menace than they are about the boys who "fired" their manager, Oscar Vitt.

"All you have to do is look back at the teams that blew a pennant," one of them said. "It isn't necessary to look back any further than the Pittsburgh outfit of 1938, which nose-dived into second place after holding what looked like a safe lead. They finished sixth the next year and they never did come back."

This much can be said for the Indians: From Bobby Feller right down to the trainer, Max Weisman, there isn't a doubt in their heads that they will bounce back and win going away. They regard the Vitt thing as an unpleasantness they had to go through, but they think it's done and dead now and that they can start all over.

The only thing about that is that their playmates on the other American league teams are not likely to let the Indians forget anything. There already are signs that the boys are going to receive an awful going-over from such siver-tongued gents as Art Fletcher of the Yanks and Mule Haas of the White Sox, and only time will tell how Hal Trosky, for instance, will react to this punishment.

The new manager, Roger Peckinpaugh, appears to be as popular with the crew as Vitt was unpopular, which is saying considerable. If Vitt talked too much, as they charged at the time of last summer's insurrection, then they won't ever find that fault with Peck, whose idea of the nice, long conversation is "Hello." There is a pleasant spirit in the camp, with modest poker played openly and a pre-dinner cocktail no high crime.

HOW TO GET A LOAN TO PAY UP OLD BILLS

You can get $100 to pay old debts or other expenses if you can repay $4.46 a month for 30 months—Loans made without endorsers or guarantors—A simple, private way to borrow.

HAVE unusual expenses caught you short of ready cash? Do you need money to pay old bills? If you have a steady job, you can readily borrow $20 to $500—and repay in small monthly installments.

Suppose that you need $100. Find this amount in the first column of the table. Then read across picking out the monthly payment you wish to make. 12 monthly installments of $9.46 each, for instance, will repay a $100 loan in full. The cost, in this case, averages less than 4c a day.

You may prefer smaller payments. Only $4.46 a month for 30 months will also repay a $100 loan. The amount you borrow and the time you take to repay it determines the cost. You can borrow $25 for two months, for instance, for only 75c.

Borrow for less

Installments in the table include all charges at Household's rate of 2% per month on that part of a balance not exceeding $300, and ½% per month on that part of a balance in excess of $300. This rate is less than the maximum prescribed by the Small Loan Law. Every customer gets the benefit of this rate—whether new customer or former borrower.

Simple to get a loan

All you do to apply for your loan is to acquaint us with your problem. Loans are made on furniture, car or note. This spares you the embarrassment of asking friends or fellow-workers to act as endorsers. At no time do we ask friends or relatives about your credit. If you should get sick or lose your job while paying on your loan, we will show you every consideration.

You are invited to phone or visit us for further information at any time. No obligation to borrow!

FREEDOM ISSUE SOFT-PEDALED IN PHILIPPINES

Island Assembly Concentrates on Fiscal Problems and Defense Bases.

MANILA — (U.P.) — The National Assembly which opened here Jan. 27 has concentrated its attention on numerous pressing problems of the country, arising from the world crisis.

The session is the assembly's last, as a bicameral legislature—to be called Congress—and will take over legislative duties after this year's elections, in accordance with one of the Philipines constitutional amendments recently approved by President Roosevelt.

Outstanding among Philippine problems, mainly attributed to unsettled world conditions, is the diminution of government revenues, attributed chiefly to declining customs collections. The partial paralysis of international commerce, owing to the shortage of ships, also has affected the country. The boost in freight rates has been effectively felt by Philippine industry, particularly the sugar industry, which already faces chaos as a result of the application of an export tax on sugar entering the United States.

Security Foremost Topic.

With the independence question apparently a closed issue, the country's defense requirements demand increasing attention. With conditions in the Far East showing no signs of improvement, the question of Philippine security after the United States withdraws in 1946 is expected to be tackled with redoubled vigor.

Many assemblymen reportedly favor a long-range plan to link Philippine economy to that of the Western Hemisphere. Under the plan, the Philippines would be placed within the economic orbit of the Western Hemisphere. Some assemblymen are said to be willing to send goodwill missions to American republics to cultivate commercial relationships.

Speaker Jose Yulo of the Assembly, who returned recently from the United States, where he worked for President Roosevelt's approval of the constitutional amendments, is reported in legislative circles to have brought back an "encouraging picture" of the Philippine position in the light of the international situation.

A "masterly analysis" of the Philipine situtions was made by the speaker before a secret meeting of about 40 assemblymen shortly after his return. Details of the talk were kept secret, but one assemblyman indicated that according to Yulo "we have nothing to fear as to the future of the Philippines."

Move Believed Weakened.

As a result of Yulo's unrevealed declarations, some proponents among assemblymen of a "realistic re-examination" of the Philippine question, initiated by former High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, have withdrawn from the re-examination movement.

Assemblyman Prospero Sanidad of Ilocos Sur, a former "re-examinationist," declared that Yulo's declarations convinced him the best course for the Philippines is to stick to the Tydings-McDuffie (independence) act.

However, the chief advocates of the re-examination move, Assemblymen Jose E. Romero of Oriental Negroes and Narciso Ramos of Pangasinan, have refused to give up their crusade. Ramos declared that Yulo's confidential disclosures regarding the Philippine problem did not turn counter to the aims of the re-examinationists. Ramos added that a re-examination still would be feasible, particularly in view of present conditions in the Far East.

Romero and Ramos indicated that, while they would not make an issue of the re-examination plan, they would defend it should it be presented to the electorate as an issue against them.

Finder Restores Money Found In 1938 With Interest.

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Ten dollars lost three years ago by Miss Ruth F. Murphy brought her $5 interest because the finder, who spent the money, had a troubled conscience.

Miss Murphy recently received a telephone call from a woman who said her husband had found her purse three years ago with the money in it and had spent the $10 "because we were up against it."

She promised the money would be returned, with interest, and a few days later Miss Murphy received the purse in the mail. It contained a $10 bill and all the original articles, plus $5 as "interest."

TAX HELPS CITY

LODI, Cal.—(U.P.)—As its contribution to ideas for new taxes to meet the national defense expenditures, this city suggests a license tax on cats. It is now reaping a fair income by means of a $1 annual license for female cats and 50 cents for toms.

CREDITS HEALTH TO GARDENING

COLUMBUS—(UP)—George R. Wheeler, 77, credits his system of "winter gardening" for his excellent health.

Wheeler spades his half-acre garden during the winter months, both for practical reasons and for exercise. He explains that after the ground is spaded in the winter "the frost pulverizes the earth, making the drainage perfect and putting the ground in good condition for grading and planting in the spring."

Wheeler boasts that his gardening habits have been partly responsible for his freedom from any serious illness during his life.

STEEL SHARES LEAD ADVANCE IN STOCK MART

Bonds Tilt Moderately Upward as Market Continues To Rally Quietly.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORW—Steel and shipbuilding shares led a further quiet advance in today's stock market.

Attracting early support were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, N. Y. Shipbuilding, American Shipbuilding, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Anaconda, Kennecott, Westinghouse and U. S. Rubber.

Bonds tilted moderately upward and commodities were mixed.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which found encouragement in the fact deliveries of steel were not behind at the recent rapid production rate.

Comforting to financial quarters were the General Motors figures disclosing gross sales for 1940 were the largest on record and 30 per cent above the 1939 aggregate.

The bureau of labor statistics estimated that nearly 1,000,000 jobs would be provided by expansion of the aircraft and shipbuilding industries within the next two years.

BRITISH BOTTLE ITALIAN FORCES IN EAST AFRICA

Retake Berbera Freeing Army For Impending Clash With Nazis In Greece.

coming campaign. British troops have been landing in Greece for some days.

Some estimates place the number of British troops in Greece at 150,000 to 200,000 but this figure may be too high. Most of the British troops, it is learned, disembarked at Piraeus, port of Athens. They were moved up to Salonika and the Macedonian border facing Bulgaria by rail and truck.

A strict censorship regarding the British expeditionary force still prevails both in Greece and in Britain. But from other sources, including British officials in Istanbul, details of the surprise operation have been obtained.

It is indicated that the British will operate chiefly on the Macedonian front with Salonika as an advanced base. If German pressure from Bulgaria is too great to hold this line, it is believed that the British plan to withdraw to Salonika and then to the main body of Greece fighting a stiff rearguard action.

The main Greek defense line may run from the Jugoslav frontier southeast to the Gulf of Salonika, a short 75-mile strip of territory which British strategists believe can be held indefinitely at considerably less cost in men and material than the narrow finger of Macedonia where Salonika is located.

The Russian military journal, Red Star, suggested that the Balkan campaign would force the British to cease offensive operations in Africa since Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell was said to lack sufficient reserves to maintain two active war fronts in the middle east.

However, the Imperial army of the Nile's blows against the Italian African empire have proceeded so far that there seemed little chance of an effective Fascist counter-offensive even with ample Nazi reinforcements.

The British now are slashing at Italian East Africa from 12 directions and are almost within striking distance of Addis Ababa and the vital railroad from that city to Djibouti, French Somaliland.

According to Greek accounts a big Italian offensive started in Albania about a week ago has been smashed up and Premier Benito Mussolini, who personally directed it, has gone back to Rome.

Rome reported that a British torpedo plane sank an Italian hospital ship in Valona Saturday night. Countess Edda Ciano, daughter of Mussolini and wife of the Italian foreign minister, was said to have been aboard the vessel and to have behaved with great bravery.

Germany also reported a big shipping loss. Berlin said that the great liner Bremen, a 51,731-ton, $20,000,000 luxury liner, had caught fire from "undisclosed origin" and had been burning for more than 24 hours.

The fact that the fire was announced by Germany might indicate that the vessel was seriously damaged or possibly a total loss since it was doubted that any acknowledgement would have been made in other circumstances.

The Germans claimed that their torpedo-planes hit two British battleships in the Mediterranean. They said that the damage was done in an attack on a British fleet comprising the battleships, six cruisers and a number of destroyers 25 miles off Crete.

The Germans picked Bristol as their main target in Britain last night and inflicted considerable damage. Other attacks were made upon Avonmouth and Plymouth in furtherance of the Nazi campaign against British ports and shipping facilities, backing up the submarine blockade.

Britain. Other consignments were being prepared for transports.

The office of production management opened a two-day conference with industrialists and labor leaders here today to perfect methods for training an adequate supply of workers to meet defense plant needs as they materialize.

President Roosevelt's Saturday night speech—one of the most strongly-worded he has ever delivered on international affairs—continued to monopolize comment today, and some passages of it evoked speculation as to the chief executive's future plans

The big points of the address, however, left no room for speculation. They were bluntly phrased and underscored with double emphasis.

The American people the president said, "Recognize the extreme seriousness of the present situation.

"That is why they have demanded, and got, a policy of unqualified, immediate, all-out aid to Britain, Greece, China and for all governments in exile whose homelands are temporarily occupied by the aggressors

"From now on that aid will be increased—and yet again increased—until total victory has been won"

Mr. Roosevelt's statement that on America's will to work and sacrifice depended the survival of the "vital bridge" of boats to transport supplies abroad was interpreted by some as hinting at convoys, but administration supporters doubted that was the intention.

One major point of discussion was Mr. Roosevelt's statement that the national effort "must not be obstructed by unnecessary strikes, (or) by short sighted management."

Another point to receive attention was Mr. Roosevelt's words to the people: "You will have to work longer at your bench, or your plow or your machine."

3 FUGITIVES HAD MEALS IN FARM KITCHEN

Resident Near Lucas Says Trio Pose as Stranded Truck Drivers.

porary bridge, made him drive 10 miles and then robbed him of $5 and took his car.

Switzer said the fugitives, all attired in prison denim, came to the house and asked to buy their suppers, explaining to his housekeeper, Mrs. Rene Hart, that their truck had broken down on route 603 near Charles Mill dam.

Mrs. Hart invited the trio inside the kitchen to eat while Mrs. Switzer prepared their meal, Switzer added.

The women and Switzer's two sons, one six and the other 14, were alone at the time.

Switzer arrived home as they were finishing their meal.

"I became suspicious when they told me they were truck drivers," he said. "I couldn't see that any of them wore chauffeurs' badges."

"Their clothes were all wet and they seemed anxious to leave as soon as I appeared," Switzer said. "They made me more suspicious when I noticed one of them eyeing a shotgun that was hanging on the wall."

Switzer said he decided to look for their "truck" after the three told that the nearest garage was at Lucas, started to hike down the highway towards Perrysville.

He got into his car and drove over route 603 to Mifflin. Failing to find the "truck" he called the reformatory and reported that he believed the men were the fugitives they were seeking.

Reformatory guards responded to the call. They searched highways in the vicinity of Perrysville and Loudonville and as far south as Mt. Vernon without finding any trace of the men.

Identified as Ronald Long, 24, Hamilton county, and James Layton, 26, and Elwood Deckerhoff, 24, both of Columbiana county, they fled from the farm dormitory Thursday at midnight, taking William's keys and locking him in a cold storage chamber.

The fugitives successfully slipped through a state patrol road blockade in southern Ashland and northern Knox county after they dumped Schnittke from his car on a country road three miles south of Loudonville.

Schnittke identified protographs later of the fugitive trio as the men who threatened him with the knives until Tuesday afternoon, the weatherman said, but he promised considerably warmer weather by Friday when spring makes its official debut. The mercury is expected to drop to near zero again tonight. The reading was 11 above in Mansfield at noon.

Streets and highways in the Mansfield district began to collect a layer of ice soon after the rain changed to snow late yesterday. The city had five trucks busy spreading salt and cinders from 6:30 p. m. Sunday to 2 a. m. today. During the period 80 tons of salt and three-fourths of a car of cinders were used.

Eastern North Dakota and northern Minnesota were hardest hit by the late winter storm which blew in from the Canadian provinces. Thousands of persons in that area were forced to spend most of Saturday night in theaters and other amusement places when police refused to let them go out in the fierce storm.

At Moorhead, Minn. 3,000 farmers attending a meeting were forced to stay in the hall all night and 2,000 spectators at a basketball tournament were marooned in the high school gymnasium where the teams continued to play throughout the night.

Low readings of 12 and 14 degrees below zero were recorded in the stricken area. Working in sub-zero weather, rescue crews continued today to dig bodies of storm victims out of snow drifts along highways in Minnesota and North Dakota.

Freddie, 7, Charles, 5, and Peter, 3, trudge down the road by themselves, unhampered by possessions.

Koston carries the luggage, he says. There are only three pieces of it, but they are heavy and all he can manage.

Koston told Salvation Army Adjutant Paul Hoffman that the family left Salem, Mass., approximately six months ago, after the family had to vacate their home there

"We packed up our belongings and started to hitch-hike," said Koston. "I wanted to get a job in Pittsburgh When we reached there, Pittsburgh was booming but I couldn't get a job because I didn't belong to the union and did not have the money to join."

"Then to top it all off," he said, "we were expecting a baby and my wife had to go to the hospital. She was there two months due to her critical condition."

"Family agencies assisted us until she was out of the hospital Then we took to the road again."

Mrs Koston looked up from her hot cereal to say she "didn't mind hitch-hiking," but said she wished the children were in school. Eleanor and Freddie both attended school in Pittsburgh.

The family, after "thawing out" at the Army Sunday night, was taken by Adjutant Hoffman to the Brunswick hoted to stay overnight This is the 65th family that the Salvation Army has assisted since January, 1940, Adjutant Hoffman said.

Koston was out bright and early looking for work today. He had visited several industries by noon and others were on his schedule for this afternoon.

Meanwhile Mrs. Koston is enjoying the warmth of the Salvation Army where the children are having a chance to catch up playing with toys provided by the adjutant's wife, Mrs. Hoffman.

toward a lightning attack by the Axis powers," said this paper.

In an equally bitter attack, the newspaper Messaggero said:

"The fact Rooseveit is able to convince broad currents of opinion demonstrates the enslavement of the (American) press."

Most newspapers in Rome published a Washington dispatch by the Stefani (Italian) news agency which said:

"The brutal betrayal of election promises reveals the profound disunity of the people of the United States, who are 100 per cent stupified, intoxicated and degraded by lying propaganda."

Gayda's editorial comment against President Roosevelt also was vitriolic.

Goebbels Calls FDR 'Bull In China Shop'

BERLIN —(U P)— The German press today opened a major Nazi propaganda barrage against President Roosevelt's British aid speech.

They gave the attack the most sensational treatment of any directed against the United States in at least six months.

Official Nazi quarters said that the press comment would constitute Germany's reply to Mr. Roosevelt.

The line of the attack was laid down by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbel's Der Angriff which charged that "Roosevelt behaved in this speech like a bull in a china shop."

"America and the world recognizes," Der Angriff said, "that Roosevelt purchased his third presidential term with false promises."

Whereas previous attacks upon Mr. Roosevelt and the United States generally have been published in single column dispatches on inside pages, today's campaign was laid down with big front-page headlines and attention-getting treatment.

his clothes sopping wet and blood streaming from his head and arms, ran to a Baden residence and had a woman telephone police.

Engineer A. R. Weigle, of Cleveland was killed at his post. His "buddy," Fireman C. H. Millburn of Alliance, who escaped with cuts and bruises, remembered that a freight train was scheduled to pass the wreck in a short time and might plough through scores of injured and dazed passengers wandering about the tracks. He quickly ran back and flagged the freight to a safe stop.

Other dead were: Mrs. Rose Jogielski, 27, Pittsbpfgh:; Donald McDonald, nine months old son of Mrs. Elizabeth McDonald of Altoona, who was in a critical condition herself at a Rochester, Pa., hospital; and Harry Kennedy, 45, a Pennsylvania railroad clerk whose body was taken from the smoker about five hours after the wreck, which occurred at 9:03 p. m.

Injured Ohioans included W. A. Snyder of Kent, C. H. Millburn of Alliance, Mary and Caramella, 20, of Niles, Daniel Schauber of Hubbard, Beatrice Peoples, 38, of Youngstown, her daughter Mary Peoples, Vivian Penner, 22, of 212 Overlook drive, Warren, Robert O'Donnell, 52, of Ravenna, Carl Fabian, 41, of Youngstown; Homer L. Wemagle of Warren, and F. S. White, Alliance, conductor on the train.

Rescue crews donned hip boots and waded into the submerged cars in search of casualties. The nearest ambulances could approach the scene was a muddy road a mile away.

Police Chief R. W. Compton of Baden, among the first at the scene, told this story:

"When I reached the scene there were three or four men running around — I guess they were crew men. The screams were awful. I ran down to the second car, where people were climbing out and running up the bank.

"Passengers were unable to get out of the third car because it was surrounded by water. Somebody threw a cross tie down and we climbed on it into the car. We helped out three women and two men.

"At the other end of the car we saw something floating. When it came closer we saw it was a baby's head. There was a woman's body under that of the baby.

"One poor old man had his leg broken in three places."

Early today the casualty list reached 107.

A formal statement by the railroad said in part:

"That the train was deliberately wrecked was established upon investigation of the track. All spikes on both sides had been pulled from the outside rail, next to the river. One end of the rail, the end facing the oncoming locomotive, was moved in 22 inches. The bolts had been removed from the splice bars which spliced this section of rail to the adjoining rails.

"That the derailment was the result of deliberate action was further indicated by the fact that the end of the section of rail involved had been moved only 22 inches from its normal position, or the length of the bend wire, which connects the rail sections and carries the electric current operating the signals.

"The bend wire itself was not disturbed and the railroad signal system was unaffected. The fact that the bend wire was undisturbed definitely indicates that it was intended that the train should get a clear signal and run into the removed rail. If the bend wire had been broken, the train would have been stopped by signal before running over the damaged section."

The railroad promised a "full investigation into every angle of the case." Federal bureau of investigation agents from Pittsburgh entered the inquiry.

The Manhattan Limited rolled past the scene 20 minutes earlier and railroad officials expressed suspicion that it might have been the object of a wreck plot.

CHAPTER I.

ARTHUR MULFORD'S secretary faced him unsuspectingly across the massive mahogany desk.

"You wanted to see me, Mr. Mulford?"

The man surveyed the slender figure before him. His shrewd eyes took in the beauty of her pale face, silky black hair, the piquant tilt of her nose, the jewel-like green eyes, eyes that would seem to see through any subterfuge.

"It's like this, Joan," he said decisively, "I'll have to let you go."

Joan Leland stared at him in astonishment. "You mean I'm fired?"

Mulford shrugged. "That's it."

"But why? What have I done? Is there anything wrong with my work? I've been with you almost two years."

She leaned across the desk and Arthur Mulford turned away from the troubled, rebellious eyes. But his voice was smooth, his manner indifferent.

"It isn't necessary for me to give explanations as to why I fire or hire anyone in this shop," he said coldly.

Indignation flared in Joan. "But surely I have a right to ask why."

He picked up a sheaf of papers and reached for the telephone.

"I don't care to discuss it. You'll receive your next two weeks' salary, of course, but you need not finish out the month."

"Needn't finish out the month! You mean this is my last day?"

"Yes! That's all, Joan!"

The girl rose, clutching her notebook tightly in one hand. She longed to protest against this injustice, even to plead, but one look into Arthur Mulford's cold gray eyes assured her that it would be useless.

The late October sunshi flowed in pale golden streams across the busy streets of San Francisco as Joan left the office and boarded a street car for the apartment she shared with her sister. Fired! There was something almost sinister about this abrupt dismissal.

"Thank heaven, Sybil has a job!" Joan thought gratefully as she unlocked the door.

The apartment boasted a fireplace and long floor-length windows. It was part of one of the old mansions for which San Francisco is famous. A regal building that had housed one of the great families of the city, now cast off by their grandchildren and subdivided into studio apartments. True, there was seldom enough heat and the cooking facilities were inadequate, but the old house reflected the charm and graciousness of the past.

Joan glanced lovingly about the room. The girls had used the furniture left to them by their parents. It was heavy, and rather old-fashioned, but it suited the high-ceilinged room.

Joan threw her hat on the table.

A voice from the bedroom hailed her. "Joan? That you?"

"Why, Syb! What are you doing home so early? I thought the beauty shop was staying open until seven this month."

Sybil appeared in the doorway clad in dressing gown and slippers, cigaret in hand. Her blond hair curled meticulously, her blue eyes were a trifle hard. The two girls seemed to have little in common in appearance or temperament. Joan, brunet, twenty, restless, impulsive. Sybil, seven years older, golden-haired, inclined to caution, especially where men were concerned. Sybil had been married and divorced when she was twenty-one. Since then she had been determined to save Joan from making the same mistake. "Never trust any man," was Sybil's motto, but Joan did not take it too seriously suspecting that her sister's cynicism was covering a broken heart.

"What a day!" Sybil said, drearily throwing herself upon the couch. "I have some news for you, Sis."

"I have something to tell you, too," Joan said grimly. "I've lost my job! Mr. Mulford gave me two weeks' salary and told me not to come back!"

Sybil sat up wide-eyed. "Oh, Joan! No!"

"He wouldn't even give me a reason," Joan continued savagely. "I can't understand it. I'm sure there isn't anything wrong with my work. There's something very strange about this, Syb! Mr. Mulford seemed positively anxious to get rid of me."

"But, Joan," Sybil interrupted, "I lost my job today too!"

The girls stared at each other in alarm.

"The beauty shop is closing," Sybil said, breaking the silence. "This is my last week."

"Well, of course we'll find something else," Joan said, but her voice carried no conviction. "After all, we're both experienced: I'm sure Mr. Mulford will give me a reference."

"Jobs aren't easy to get . . ."

"Don't be a pessimist, darling!" Joan advised.

She tied a colored apron around her waist and went into the kitchen.

"There's nothing to worry about tonight. We've got enough money in our account to last almost a month."

Sybil's blue eyes were troubled. "Joan, that's just it! I checked that money out yesterday to pay for a new coat. I thought we didn't need it and I was going to pay it back a little each month. There's not a cent left in that account."

Night had fallen with a suddenness which filled the apartment with a strange new silence. Foghorns had begun to sound their doleful notes over the bay.

"How much money have you in your purse?" Joan inquired, frowning.

"Two or three dollars. And you?"

"I have this check from Mr. Mulford. That will pay the rent for another month."

Sybil shivered and drew her quilted satin robe closer. "What are we going to do then?"

"You couldn't return the coat?"

"No. It's been altered."

"I'll start looking tomorrow," Joan said resolutely. "Mr. Mulford's usually at the store until late. I'm going to telephone him and tell him I'll stop by in the morning to get a reference. I forgot all about it this afternoon. I was so upset."

Sybil watched in silence as Joan dialed the number.

"This is Joan Leland. May I speak to Mr. Mulford?"

There was a pause before a strange feminine voice replied. "I'm sorry. That will be impossible. Mr. Mulford left town an hour ago."

"That's right."

"Who is this speaking, please?" Joan inquired hotly.

"I am his sceretary," the voice informed her and the receiver clicked.

"He's left town! And he's already hired a new secretary!"

"I told you there was something funny about this! And how can you get a reference if he's not here? You've never worked for anyone else."

"That's what worries me!"

"Let's eat," Sybil suggested. "I can't think when I'm hungry."

Silently the girls prepared and ate their dinner. They washed the dishes and replaced them on the gaily papered shelves.

"I suppose we should move," Sybil said practically as they returned to the living room.

Joan touched a match to the logs in the fireplace and soon the crackling blaze sent comfort and cheer into the room. The plum-colored rug seemed rich and warm in the firelight, the old-fashioned mahogany shone, and the numerous brass ash trays and boxes that the girls had picked up one by one in Chinatown lent a warm glow.

"I love this place," Joan protested. "And besides, it will cost so much to move all the furniture."

Sybil dragged a cushion to the fireplace and sank down, gazing thoughtfully into the flames. Outside the foghorns sounded more insistently and fog dripped mournfully against the window panes.

"Cheerful night," Sybil commented.

"I know!" Joan cried suddenly. "I'll look for a job in the want ads. Where's the paper?"

Sybil indicated the small coffee table. "But that's not a very good way to find a job. You never know what you may be getting into."

"Who cares?" Joan seized the paper and turned to the classified section. "I need a job and I need it right now!"

"You don't often find jobs for secretaries in the paper anyway."

"No? Listen to this." Joan's voice rang with excitement as she read, "'Competent secretary wanted. Willing to work nights. Apply after 9 p. m.'"

"What does it matter? A job's a job."

Sybil stared at her in disapproval. "You're not serious?"

Joan jumped up and ran into the bedroom. "I certainly am! I'm going to apply for that job right now!"

Sybil followed her. "You'll do nothing of the kind, Joan Leland! We're not that hard up. Even if we were, I don't want you to get mixed up with something crooked."

Joan laughed recklessly as she ran a comb throught the raven-black hair and touched a powder puff to the white skin. "You take everything too seriously, Syb! After all, there's no harm in applying for the job. If something is wrong with it, I can tell when I go down there."

Sybil was unconvinced. "I don't like the sound of it," she insisted stubbornly. "What's the address?"

"North Beach," Sybil said carelessly.

"North Beach? That's certainly not a very good place for a girl to be working nights!"

"How do I look?" Joan asked.

Exasperated, Sybil stared at her. The wide-brimmed black hat cast a soft shadow over the heart-shaped face, the piquant slightly upturned nose, the green eyes sparkling like jewels in their excitement. Joan looked sophisticated, too sophisticated, Sybil thought, because at heart Joan was just a kid. She didn't know anything about life, or, about men.

"Be careful, Joan! And come right home afterwards, will you?"

Of, course! Stop treating me like a child!"

She drew black gloves over her long slender fingers and surveyed herself in the mirror for the last time.

"I'll call you after the interview, if that will make you feel any better."

"I still don't understand why Mulford fired you without notice or reason," Sybil pondered. "And why did he leave town, if that girl is telling the truth? By the way, what is she doing at the office at night?"

"I don't know. Of course I worked at night once in a while. It's strange that he should start a new girl at night. But an importing shop is a little different from a regular office."

"I don't understand why he would hire another secretary so quickly. Maybe she was lying."

"But why should she? And why should Mr. Mulford try to avoid me?"

"I wouldn't know," Sybil admitted. "But I want you to watch your step tonight."

Joan, however, was not even thinking of her sister's warning as she stepped from the street car into the damp, foggy streets of North Beach. With mounting curiosity, she walked to the address given in the paper.

"Why it's a night club!" she said aloud as she paused under the long canopy that led to the street.

A sign on the door informed the passerby that the Club Elite would be open for business the following Saturday night.

Joan pushed open the heavy door and went in. She paused a moment to accustom her eyes to the dim light. To the right she could see a large room filled with gilded tables and chairs and a band stand which seemed to crowd a small dance floor. The walls were hung with soft blue and beige draperies.

A man appeared suddenly out of the shadows and surveyed her from head to foot before he said, "Well, what do you want?"

Joan said uneasily, "I came about an ad that was in the paper for a secretary."

He seemed relieved. "Okay. Down the hall. Second door to the left. The boss will talk to you."

Joan, following instructions, opened the door into a large modernistic office. A powerful built, blond man stood before a filing cabinet. He turned quickly as she entered.

"I came about the job advertised in the paper," she faltered.

He flashed her a quick smile from steel-blue eyes. "Won't you sit down?" His voice was tinged with an accent. Joan saw a hard face, almost grim, yet amusement hovered in his eyes. His lips seemed not to move as he spoke. The hand that indicated a chair was beautifully shaped, the fingers tapering and artistic. There was something strangely magnetic about this man.

"I am Karl Miller. And you?"

"Joan Leland is my name. Until today I have been employed by an importing firm owned by Arthur Mulford."

Don't be a Blowhard!

Remember that your nose is not made of rubber. If you keep on blowing and blowing, it's bound to become red, sore, and swollen. So stop blowing.

The easy, modern way to clear stopped-up nostrils due to a cold is to use Mentholatum. All you need do is insert this gentle ointment inside your nostrils—spread some outside, too. See how quickly it clears up the stuffiness and relieves irritation—how it checks sniffling and sneezing.

Once you use Mentholatum you'll say it's wonderful. It helps in so many different ways that you should always remember this: For Discomforts of Colds—Mentholatum. Link them together in your mind.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, MONDAY, MARCH 17, 1941.

If you'd get your new auto license plates tomorrow you'd avoid the last minute rush.

One trouble with the American standard of living is that it's so hard to maintain on a cash basis.

California is anticipating an unusually large crop of wild flowers—and the state's nut crop also appears to be up to standard.

America Pledged To 'Total Effort'

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S Saturday night address to members and guests of the White House Correspondents' association was far more than a talk to that particular group—it was directed to every American citizen and was also a message of hope to liberty-loving people throughout the world.

In summarized form the president frankly stated the position of the United States of America in the present world crisis and pledged the utmost support of this nation in the war against aggression by the Axis powers.

The path ahead, as depicted by the president, will not be an easy one, but will call for sacrifices and willing co-operation by every citizen.

"Upon the national will to sacrifice and to work," he said, depends the output of our industry and our agriculture . . . Upon that will depends our ability to aid other nations which may determine to offer resistance.

"This will of the American people will not be frustrated either by threats from powerful enemies abroad, or by small, selfish groups or individuals at home."

It was here that the president clearly stated what is very generally recognized: "The determination of America must not be obstructed by war profiteering. It must not be obstructed by unnecessary strikes of workers, by short-sighted management, or by deliberate sabotage. For unless we win there will be no freedom for either management or labor."

A note of confidence in the ultimate outcome carried through the president's entire address. A glowing tribute was paid to the fortitude and high morale of the British people and to the leadership of Winston Churchill.

There was assurance, also, that America will give immediate, all-out aid to Britain, Greece and China, and that there will be help for "all the governments in exile whose homelands are temporarily occupied by the aggressors."

Whatever shadow of doubt may have remained in the mind of anyone as to the future course of the United States in the present phase of the resumed World war has been dispelled by the president's plain statement: "We know that Prussian autocracy was bad enough but Naziism is far worse . . . Humanity will never permanently accept a system imposed by conquest and based on slavery."

And if there had been a remaining shred of doubt in the minds of dictators and their followers, as to the intent of the United States, that also should be dispelled.

"Total effort" to attain "total victory" over the Axis powers is now the publicly announced intent of this nation—in association with all other nations fighting for the preservation of democracy and the restoration of freedom to the millions of people from whom it has been taken by military force.

Civic Music Patronage Gains

SUCCESS of the just-concluded series of concerts presented by the Mansfield Civic Music association is gratifying evidence of this city's ability, and willingness, to support the efforts of this organization to bring high grade entertainment to local and vicinity music lovers.

In a city of Mansfield's size there is requirement for a wide diversification of entertainment, but in no field is the character of a community better exemplified than in the extent to which patronage is accorded such endeavors as that of the Civic Music group.

Steady growth of interest, as shown by the past season's pacity attendance and the satisfaction expressed after each the concerts, indicates that the Civic Music association been accorded a place among Mansfield's highly meri- done ious community activities and that it will continue to ive the encouragement and financial support necessary aintain the fine standard of entertainment which has ed its programs thus far.

h-Americans Appeal To Eire

SERVANCE of St. Patrick's day brings to mind that Irish Americans have always been passionately inter- in Ireland. They have raised much money and made t speeches for the cause of Irish independence and inly contributed something to the establishment of formerly known as the Irish Free tate. Their loyalty e United States has never been questioned. But often attitude toward all things English has been mistrustful, openly unfriendly.

is therefore all the more interesting to have a group of prominent Irish Americans—including educators, writers, lators, lawyers, soldiers, labor leaders and a former ice commissioner—send a joint cable to Prime Minister Valera concerning aid to Britain.

They ask him to open Eire's western ports to Great Britain because "the lifeline between Great Britain and America has become the lifeline of civilization."

"This lifeline is threatened," they said. "We ask you to do this for the sake of that Irish freedom which our ancestors fought to win. We ask it also as Americans. What we ask of you, America is preparing to do herself by opening her ports to the British."

They grant that there may be risk in such action, but add, "When have Irishmen been afraid to take a risk against the powers of evil?"

How effective this appeal will be nobody knows. But one of these days some small nation is going to have the courage to stand with a neighbor before it is too late and it would be fine if Eire proved to be the foresighted one.

Word comes that "Count Carnera" is to be given a try-out in New York—it is said honest crooks can be found to put it across.

This is the season of the year in which winter trades have made all of the major league baseball teams appear invincible.

The supply of tobacco is said to be the largest in history—which may leave more of the cabbage crop to be used as food.

THE TROUBLES OF A BUSINESS MAN

Aviation's Place In Modern War

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

THAT the airplane has become a tremendously important weapon in wartime is no news. Orthodox army and navy men continue, however, to insist that it's only an arm (though they recognize it as a vitally essential one) of their respective services. That is to say, they argue that surface forces, on land and sea, still are the main thing.

It isn't for a mere civilian to question the accuracy of these experts' judgment. Yet it's hard for him, if he's followed developments, since the current conflict broke out in Europe and since we launched our pending defensive campaign, without suspecting that the old-fashioned surface fighters incline to belittle aviation's potentialities, in calling it just an "arm."

He can't but wonder if they're not simply unwilling to admit that they're in rapid progress toward being out-moded—that the flyers are transforming their corps into the "main thing," and that presently armies and navies will find themselves as nothing but military aviation's auxiliary "arms."

For instance, isn't it significant that when President Roosevelt, the other day, asked congress for a $3,812,311,197 emergency supplementary United States army fund, he specified that $1,412,261,000 is needed for military aviation?

That's more than one-third of the total. Isn't that a pretty large proportion, if aviation classes as an "arm" alone?

The ground force advocates argue, to be sure, that, while flyers can do a lot of damage and are invaluable as observers for army and navy tacticians, they can't be landed on enemy soil in sufficient numbers to occupy and hold it.

Planes Beat Poland.

Nevertheless, planes were principally responsible for the Germans' conquests of Norway, Denmark, Holland, Belgium and occupied France. They were the whole show in Poland. And, on the opposite side, British airmanship has had a lot to do with Anglo-Greek successes against Italy in Albania. Furthermore, it may yet prove decisive against the Nazis, not by raiding their realm directly, but by playing smash with Herr Hitler's Balkan source of oil supplies; without it he can't fly his Messerschmidts and Heinkels. That would cripple him—plenty.

It's problematic how effectively planes can operate at very long range.

The countries Der Fuehrer's craft have bombed have been nearby his own taking-off places. It might be different if they had to fly the Atlantic, to bother us here. They could get here, of course, and doubtless spill a few pineapples.

It's highly unlikely that many of them would get back home, though, or drop more parachutists than our local police forces could deal with readily. It seems improbable that that kind of an attempted invasion would work very well here—not as aviation's possibilities exist now.

And yet, President Roosevelt's opinion (which certainly must be exceptionally well informed) is that our safety requires more than half as large an aviation allowance as our surface army does.

From all accounts, we need a great many more planes. But we need a great many more men to fly them also. It isn't only planes that we're shy on, if we're to be adequately provided for against contingencies. We need personnel to pilot them, and drop bombs.

Health and Diet

How Peru's State Restaurants Operate.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I HAVE been traveling for some weeks in South America, taking the opportunity to study medical problems, and if there are several articles on the South American scene in the next few weeks, I hope my readers will find them interesting.

One of the most remarkable social developments I found in Peru. Here the ministry of social reform has instituted public restaurants, operated by the state, where anyone can get a three-course meal for four cents.

When I paid a visit to one of these establishments, it was just the time for the school children to be having their lunch. There were about fifteen hundred of them, coming in relays, the overflow stretching in queues clear into the street. School children can get breakfast and lunch free.

The enormous advantage, of course, is that the meals are planned by the department of public health, and are hence balanced meals, with vitamins and minerals.

The same advantage applies to the meals given the adults. For four cents they got, the day I was there, a good, nourishing soup, veal with rice and gravy, and bread, and a dessert pudding. Of course coffee, for South America is the land of coffee.

The building was a light, airy one-storied structure, with floors and walls of tile so that they could be easily cleaned, table tops the same, and kitchen scrupulously clean. The men eat in one room; the women in another.

Milk For the Babies.

Off the women's room is a nursery, with cribs for over a hundred babies. Clean rubber covers were being laid on the mattresses. The babies are given a bottle of clean, scientifically prepared milk for one cent, and a nurse tends to them while the mothers are in the nearby dining room.

There are eight such establishments in the city of Lima.

The official who accompanied me to the restaurant said as we drove away, "There is no Communism in Peru."

Certainly it seemed that our neighbor has carried out a very advanced policy.

Think of the contrast between this way of feeding the economically under-privileged and the haphazard way they are fed in many of our large American cities.

I saw a number of other indications of social progress in medical lines in Peru as well as other South American republics. Everywhere there are large free hospitals—separate ones for men, for women and for children. Some of these were erected with the profits on the public lotteries. Others are part of the government policy of social security, which is far more advanced than ours. Every employed person pays a percentage of wages as insurance, the employer also adding an allotted percentage. This is insurance against sickness, accident, unemployment and death.

The sickness insurance seems to act very well. I can assure the American Medical association that it has been fostering about such a procedure in the United States seem very old-womanish when one sees the scheme in operation.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Farming Out Overdue Orders to Smaller Firms Being Considered

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Every train to Washington brings a group of small business men with rumpled collars and bulging brief cases. They've heard high officials declare that the defense boom should be evenly distributed. They've read about a sub-contracting program for the smaller firms. So they come to town loaded with blue-prints and inventories of machine tools.

The visitors wait paiently in Defense offices to ask the same question: "When do we get contracts or sub-contracts?" Then they go home empty-handed, cussing the "bureaucrats running the defense program."

What they don't know is that the issue of sub-contracting is being fought over daily, and with increasing bitterness, at the inner conference tables of the Office of Production Management. The question is whether OPM should crack down on the big primary contractors and force them to farm out their piled-up orders.

The powerful big industry clique says "No." It argues that forced sub-contracting would be costly and unreliable. Bob Mehornay, a liberal small business man in charge of sub-contracting, hotly denies this and is battling to overrule them.

He wants authority to decide whether overloaded big contractors should get additional machine tools through the Priorities Board. He wants to be consulted on giving the big fellows extensions of time to complete their overdue orders, also to require them to make periodic progress reports.

The cold facts are that although 200,000 firms are available for defense contracts, 90 per cent of the orders awarded during the last half of 1940 went to 600 large concerns. And 114 of them got 95 per cent of all contracts over $100,000, amounting to $6,668,800,000.

Despite the frantic pleas of Defense officials for speed, a number of these orders have clauses forbidding sub-contracting without the permission of the primary contractor.

No wonder defense production is lagging.

Note—The Defense Contract Service estimates that 50 per cent of the machine tools in the country are either idle or working less than eight hours a day.

Mellon Art Gallery.

BOTH the building and contents of the Mellon-financed National Art Gallery, which opens formally in the capital today have been the target of heated criticism by architects and artists.

Some have derisively described the Greco-Roman structure as a "mausoleum"; others have cast doubt on the authenticity of certain of the prized old masterpieces. It is alleged that two of the Rubens and one Van Dyke were not actually painted by them, but by pupils.

Brilliant, witty Ned Bruce, who as head of the Federal Fine Arts Section has done more than any man in U. S. history to promote art in the country, has tended to his own knitting. But the other day, when a friend asked him for his opinion of the $50,000 Mellon collection, Bruce replied with a quiet smile, "It's perfectly Duveen."

Note—The late Lord Joseph Duveen, noted British art dealer, sold the late secretary of the treasury most of the masterpieces of his collection.

Merry-Go-Round.

THAT $1-a-day wage increase asked by the United Mine Workers was a compromise forced on John L. Lewis. Looking for trouble, he wanted to demand $2 a day, but other UMW leaders, at the secret policy meeting last Monday night, voted him down. . . . Banner headline in the latest issue of the Townsend Weekly is causing a lot of laughs on Capitol Hill: "Founder Calm In Face of Victory." The old-age pension scheme of "Founder" Townsend has no more chance of being enacted than of jumping over the moon. . . . Two factors were chiefly responsible for the smashing defeat in the house of the proposal to investigate the defense program. One was the widespread unpopularity of its sponsor, Representative Gene Cox, raspy little Georgian; the other was the oratorical haymakers swung by Representative Ewing Thomason of Texas, one of the most respected members in the chamber, and square-shooting Representative Charles Plumley, Vermont Republican. . . . Although his re-election is still 18 months off, forth right Representative Bob Ramspeck's denunciation of the bill in the Georgia legislature to ban strikes in defense industries already has brought out an anti-labor candidate against him. Ramspeck opposed the bill on the ground that if it were adopted, Defense officials would cancel some big defense projects he is trying to get for his district.

Army Morals.

GENIAL Mark McCloskey, the Federal Security agency's recreation expert, has the soldier's moral lapse figured down to one crucial hour. This hour is the one during which he waits for a bus or train to take him back to camp.

McCloskey, whose job it is to worry about such things and work with the army and navy, has doped out that if time drags heavily during that hour of waiting the soldier may make for honky-tonks—and who's to blame him?

"The smart thing to do," McCloskey says, "is to brighten up the terminals. Give the boys a place to shoot pool, get some good chow at low prices, and read new magazines. Some pretty waitresses for the boys to kid won't hurt any either."

He doesn't think a tour through the museum of art or a brisk walk do much to combat temptation. Instead he'd like to see every town near a camp organize an honest-to-goodness information bureau for the men.

"If the boys want to go to a dance, get a date, visit with some patriotic family, or see a ball game, the community ought to arrange it for them," contends McCloskey.

He beams when he mentions the 200 girls at the Tom Huston peanut factory at Columbus, Ga., who volunteered to act as hostesses for soldiers at dances and social events. So far as he's concerned, that will do more for morals and morale than all the dry, desiccated lectures well-meaning folks arrange for the "dear boys."

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—With the lease-lend bill out of the way, the cry of small manufacturers located away from the eastern seaboard to get in on defense contracts is almost sure to rise to a roar.

Already it is a lusty shout in Washington. Even now congressmen and senators are stuffing cotton in their ears as they try to understand pleas from small industrialists.

The other day I sat in the office of an army colonel into whose lap is dumped a large number of the prospectuses and catalogs that descend on the army.

"Just look at those heaps," he groaned, indicating piles of prospectuses. They were all shapes and sizes and ranged from elaborate ones printed in color to sheaves of poorly typed script.

"It's a job, but you have to go through every one. Sometimes they have something we want badly.

"Here, for instance."

Field Kitchens.

HE PULLED out three neatly written prospectuses, and told how one town is planning to get its share of defense industry.

One prospectus can be disposed of immediately, for although it came from a comparatively large awning maker who wanted to turn out tents, his machines will only do nine stitches to the inch and army requirements call for 11.

The second can be tossed off almost as quickly for this company simply made something different that the army might want badly—portable electrical units for heavy duty use (originally used in the oil fields). Army engineers are investigating.

It was the third prospectus, though, that set this town aside. It had some partially abandoned railroad shops. A survey showed it had 22 plants with machine tools af various types.

All were running on schedules far short of capacity. None of them, being so small that they could not perform enough operations to turn out finished articles, could hope to get defense orders of any size.

They envisioned losing even their domestic business through the operation of priorities (materials being given to plants that did have defense contracts) and the loss of their skilled workmen to factories which could pay higher wages.

Hanging Together.

AND then one of the men got an idea. If they were all going down separately, maybe they could swim together. The whole program was revised. The plants were arranged, theoretically, like a belt line in a big mass production factory. The result was staggering.

Together, it was found, they could turn out guns and gun carriages; armour plate for tanks, cars and trucks; and a dozen other things.

Even now, army engineers are on the way to this town (its name cannot be used until reports are in and some action taken).

"If their reports bear out this prospectus," says the colonel, "they have what we want and as long as citizens of any town can show us they have what we want, they will get action here."

A Farmer's Diary

Her First Lamb

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

YES, there are new lamps, already, in my neighbor's field! As I passed near the barn I heard what always sounded to me like a wee baby's cry. It was startlingly plaintive and sweet and young. As I walked closer to the pasture the flock of forty sheep shyly moved away, but a young mother, weak from labor, stayed some distance behind. She looked troubled as I drew nearer, and stamped first one forefoot and then the other upon the yielding sod.

The little lamb was wobbly, for its legs were stiff and heavy. It turned and looked at me and I saw it shake and shiver, for its coat was not yet combed dry by the doting mother's tongue. Its white woolly coat had twisted ringlets all over flank, head and rump. Then the little creature cried, not as in pain, but just for exercise. I glimpsed the broad thin supple tongue and the tiny nostrils moving freely.

I hoped to watch him cry again, but his mother bleated a low sheepish message, and walked, oh so gently, by, until her round fruitful udder almost touched his nose. He needed not a second invitation, but knelt with his dark hoofs protruding backward. Even before he touched the nipple, his long white woolly tail began to wiggle like a skillfully agitated rope. I stood and watched his little "tummy" swell. He fed until he could take no more, and all the while the ewe watched me and murmured affectionate prideful bleats of mother love. Her liquid eyes were strangely tender and all her interests were upon the little one.

Then she lay down on the sun-warmed bed of cornstalks near the standing youngster. Sleepily he eased in between her hind and fore legs until he was half covered in her coat. His head began to droop as the sun shone on him, and his eyes closed tightly. An eager robin flitted by and early bluebirds warbled as the gentle mother put her firstborn to sleep.

The farmer's dog came close to the fence and peeped between the rails. An angry look of fear shot in the direction of that trashy cur and her slender feet and inquisitive muzzle cuddled her sleeping youngster closer.

I picked up a worn piece of sandstone and heaved it at the offensive, intruding dog. It crashed hard on the rail above his head. With a howl of fear he ran for home, and did not look back.

BUCYRUS—Dedication of the new Moose lodge building on East Mansfield street, will be held tonight in the second floor lodge room in a closed lodge ritual. The public was admitted to the building in a formal opening last Sunday when hundreds of visitors inspected the new quarters.

Built originally to house the Methodist church congregation the building later was used as a business office. It has been undergoing remodeling and modernization during the past several months, and now is one of the most modern lodge buildings in the city.

BUCYRUS — Crawford county fair board members voted to abandon the Crawford county junior fair this year with the view of concentrating on securing a grand stand at the fairgrounds.

The junior fair replaced the county fair last year after a bond issue to reconstruct a grand stand, destroyed by fire, failed to be approved by the voters. The junior fair did not attract a sufficient number of attendants to justify repeating this year, Leonard Waldbauer, president of the board, stated.

GETS TRAINING

Ashland High School Placed In 'Superior' Class.

ASHLAND—A rating of superior was awarded Ashland high school by the group of educators who visited the school three days last week. The departments or factors that brought credit to the school will be maintained and improved and the suggestions for improvement of various items will be acted upon as speedily as possible.

"We received enough impetus to keep us busy for at least two years," one of the faculty members remarked after the many charts and "measuring sticks" were studied. S. F. Jameson, principal, stated "to say that the school has a rating of superior is very inadequate. There are so many qualifications to each phase of the evaluation that one can not get a clear picture of the whole by just a mere statement."

"It seemed like an interesting game" one of the pupils stated after the guests had left. Plans are in preparation to act upon some of the suggestions made for improvement.

Informally Speaking...

March 17, 1941.

Lucy, dear:

GREETINGS for a gay St. Patrick day—even though it probably is one of the coldest ones on record! And it's this weather that makes me no little envious of those folks who are enjoying southern vacations right now. . . . Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lex left yesterday morning for Hot Springs, Ark., with plans to be gone for about two weeks. . . . From Hot Springs they're going to New Orleans, La., Hattiesburg and Camp Shelby, Miss., and Lake Wales—returning home through Atlanta, Ga.

* * * * *

The morning mail brought a post card from Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Appleman, saying that they're having a wonderful trip through Florida, and that the weather has been delightful. . . . They vacationed in Key West, Fort Lauderdale and many other places of interest, and started north again this past week-end. Enroute, they're stopping at Auburndale to visit with some other Mansfield vacationers, Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Silcott.

* * * * *

Marianne

Florida is now a pleasant memory for Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Winbigler, as they arrived back in town, following a sojourn there. . . . They drove down through Tennessee, Georgia and the eastern coast of Florida, to Miami, with stop-offs in such interesting places as Daytona Beach, Miami and Fort Lauderdale. . . . They returned by coming up along the northern coast of the state and through the Smoky and Blue Ridge mountains—having been gone for nearly three weeks. . . . And Dr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hunter are at home again after a vacation in Miami Beach, Fla., and Havana, Cuba.

* * * * *

THE former Louise Krause is back in town for the first time since her marriage to Charles C. Petersen on Christmas day in Florida. . . . Her father, Albert Krause, came north on business, and so Louise accompanied him for a brief visit. . . . She's residing in West Palm Beach, Fla. now, you know.

* * * * *

Next time you're in Cleveland, you'll undoubtedly want to attend a performance of "Flight to the West," at the Drury theater, as a former Mansfielder, Amy Carpenter Douglass, will be playing one of the leading roles. . . . The play will open on March 26, with Miss Douglass in the part of a newspaper correspondent in a drama about an air clipper's eventful trip from Lisbon to New York. . . . This week will see Miss Douglass for the last time in the role of the murderess in "Invitation to a Murder," which is closing at the Brooks theater next Sunday night, after a 13-weeks run.

* * * * *

THESE are busy days for Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bonar, as they are getting things in order to move to the West Coast. . . . They are planning to leave Mansfield in about two weeks for Burbank, Cal., where Mr. Bonar has accepted a position with the Vega Aircraft company. . . . They will drive out with their young son, David.

* * * * *

And speaking of busy days, William F. Paulsen will probably find all of them to be that way from now until his graduation from the Worcester Polytechnic institute in June. . . . All of the senior students there are hard at work now on individual research problems, for which they are gathering data in various laboratories and compiling their findings in reports to be bound and filed as permanent records for the college library. . . . William's subject is "The Study of Rifle-Barrel Drilling Problems."

* * * * *

All of which seems to wind up the news for today, Lucy, so do write soon.

Lovingly,

Marianne

Mother-In-Law Finds Means Of Happiness

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

For some weeks now this column has been running an In-Law Forum, in which correspondents have been invited to air their in-law troubles, if any; to give thanks for their in-law blessings, if any, and generally get the old in-law chips off their shoulders.

Some of the revelations have been unbelievable. Plots for a dozen plays have been revealed. The mother-in-law has come in for the usual blitzkrieg in some cases. In other instances, as in the letter cited today she is happy under the same roof with her daughter-in-law, and the household is happier for her presence.

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I've been reading your column for a long while, and have been particularly interested in the In-Law Forum. My daughter-in-law took me not only into my son's home but into her heart. The first time I met her I made up my mind she was the daughter I'd always wanted but never had.

"I didn't hate her for marrying my son. The first time we met she put her arms around me and said, 'Welcome to our home, dear Mother.' I knew then that our friendship was assured. When not employed I have lived with them off and on for ten years, and we've never had a harsh word or a misunderstanding.

"Perhaps the secret of our success is that I never interfere at any time in any of their affairs and arrangements. I mind my own business and realize they have their own lives to live.

"I have stayed with them as much as a year at a time, yet when I go there my daughter-in-law is the first to greet me with a kiss and tell me how welcome I am. I never refer to her as daughter-in-law, but always as my daughter."

"MRS.) H. A. B."

It's a pleasure to publish this letter, which shows conclusively that the relationship between a mother-in-law and her son's wife need not be one of declared or undeclared warfare.

It seems to me, after reading scores of letters which have come from in-law belligerents, that so much of the tragedy which poisons the lives of these people could be averted by a little tact and common sense.

THEATERS

Frontier Perils.

In the days when the west was still a frontier of savage Indians and sudden danger, a band of 400 trailblazers started out under Edward Creighton from Omaha, Neb., to build a telegraph line to Salt Lake City. It was expected to take 10 years to complete the job, but instead it was finished in only three months and 20 days. This exciting chapter in history is depicted in Zane Grey's "Western Union," which is showing at the Ohio. Robert Young, Randolph Scott and Virginia Gilmore have the leads.

Re-Issue of Film.

It required a cast of more than 3,000 persons to bring to the screen the dramatic values of "Here Comes the Navy," which has been reissued because of the added significance the picture has taken on since it was first shown. It is now a feature at the Madison and stars James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Co-attraction is an entertaining comedy, "Honeymoon For Three," with Ann Sheridan and George Brent in the leading roles.

Drama of the Stage.

Miriam Hopkins has the leading role in "Lady With Red Hair," the attraction at the Ritz Tuesday and Wednesday. Co-starred with her is Claude Rains. The story is of Mrs. Leslie Carter, the actress who became internationally famous during the glittering era at the turn of the century. Rains has the important role of David Belasco and Laura Hope Crews and Helen Westley are in the supporting cast. Co-feature is an old-timer, "Cock of the Air," starring Chester Morris.

Monster Role.

A circus fire is only one of the many exciting scenes in the Boris Karloff horror story, "The Ape," which is playing through Wednesday at the Park. Karloff, a respected small-town doctor by day and a prowling ape by night, plays a new type of role which is sure to please those who like the "monster" films. In a more cheerful mood is "Melody Ranch" starring Gene Autry, Jimmy Durante and Ann Miller, the dancer.

Laughton In Lead.

One of the most spectacular pictures of all time was "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," a screen transmutation of Victor Hugo's renowned novel of that name. Charles Laughton plays the title role in this film which begins Tuesday at the Majestic. In it is seen a vivid pageant of medieval Parisian life staged against dazzling sets. Co-attraction is "The Marines Flying High," with Chester Morris, Richard Dix and Lucille Ball in the leads.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I FELT as if I were in a mental fog as I went on with the reading of the astounding letter which Marion had sent Ronald. But I knew that never had I more needed a clear brain, and I forced myself back to reasoning power with the consciousness that Ronald was watching every movement of my facial muscles — I was thankful that he could not see the expression of my eyes as I bent lower over the letter and continued reading:

"This is a terrible thing to write to you, Ronald, and pleese beleive that I would rather cut off my right hand than do it."—I could imagine how Ronald's lips had curled at that melodramatic cliche, "but there's no use putting it off. It's all over with us. There never can be anything more. I'm going to marry this man just as soon as I can manage it, and he can fix up things with his people. I'm going to leave college, which I suppose will just about kill Mums, but as I figure it, I've got to live my own life. Older people can't live it for me."

More cliches, I told myself, but my lips did not curl. They were getting stiff with fear at what might lie behind this letter so inexplicable to anyone who knew and loved Marion.

"Pleese don't write me or try to see me," the letter went on. "It will be no use. I can't see you even for a minute."

I knew Ronald had read that correctly as "won't," and understood the boy's bewildered despair at this abrupt cruelty from the girl in whose faith he had believed as he had that of God.

"There are two things I want to ask of you," the letter finished, "and I know that no matter how angry you are at me, you will do them.

"First, I don't want you to breathe a word of this to Mums and Dad, or to your mother and father, or to Carol. Pleese let them go on thinking well of me until the time comes soon when they will hate and dispise me.

"Second, and this is funny, but I have a reason for it. I want you to show this letter to Mary Veritzen. She and I have had a bet for a long time about something which she's won now, only she doesn't know it. When she reads this letter, she'll know she's won, but she won't like me any the better for it. Indeed, I suppose nobody will like me any more. And beleive me, Ronald, I'm sorry for what I'm doing to you. I wouldn't do it, only as I said this thing is just too strong for me.

"I won't ask you to forgive me, but—don't hate me.

"Sorrowfully, Marion."

I read the letter through three times, then folded it, and raised my eyes to meet Ronald's piercing ones.

"Well!" he said with unutterable misery and bitterness in his voice, "that was a nice thing to hand me out of a clear sky, wasn't it? Do you wonder that I was nearly insane?"

"No, I don't wonder at your emotions, Ronald," I told him coolly. "But I do at the way your brain is functioning. Your mental vision must be sorely impaired."

He shot out of his chair and towered above me.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked, almost truculently.

"Simply that either Marion never wrote this letter—"

"She signed it, didn't she?" he demanded. "Did you look at her signature?"

"Yes, and I still stick by what I said before. It may be a clever forgery, or it easily may be her own signature—under coercion."

"She'd die before she'd write a false letter like that," he said with a superb belief in the girl he loved.

I took a quick advantage of that statement.

"And yet," I said, "you're believing her guilty of a baseness far greater than that."

"But girls do get infatuated like that, sometimes," he said defensively, with a rising flush. "Perhaps, as she says, it was too strong for her."

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, March 18.

A PARTICULARLY lively and progressive day is read from the dominant planetary aspects, with the promise of much pleasure and personal gratification all along the line. Group interests of a humane or welfare objective are under unusually good augury and should end in high achievement toward desired aims, but it would be well to exercise much precaution in handling all writings or documents with an eye to possible fraud, duplicity or falsification.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively and enterprising year, with much personal gratification and enjoyment. Matters of a public or humane nature are under excellent stimuli for the attainment of advanced objectives, but it would be well to use every precaution against fraud, treachery or misrepresentation. Intimate associations also benefit by circumspection. With this domestic and affectional affairs should flourish.

A child born on this day should be very enterprising, progressive and clever, with noble and humane impulses, although it might, under high strung nervous energy be prone to resort to expediency rather than principle.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

WHEN TO LEAD THE TOP

Your best lead, in your partner's suit, is ordinarily fourth-best if he is a card reader. It will help him know you have a goodly number of cards in the suit and tell him how many the declarer has, thereby giving him a line on the declarer's count in other suits. But if you have supported your partner's suit during the auction, he already knows about your possession of length in it. The thing he doesn't know is how high your top card is. For that reason, it is generally best to lead the top of the suit if you have already shown length.

	♠ Q 8 4 ♥ A Q J 5 ♦ 10 7 ♣ A K 7 4
♠ J 6 5 3 2 ♥ K 8 3 2 ♦ K ♣ Q 6 5	N. W. E. S.	♠ A K 10 9 ♥ 9 7 6 ♦ Q J 8 4 ♣ 10 8
	♠ 7 ♥ 10 4 ♦ A 9 6 5 3 2 ♣ J 9 3 2

(Dealer: East. North-South vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Dbl
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣

South didn't have a chance to make this contract without help from his opponents. But he got some, beginning with the opening lead. West, having supported the spades of his partner, had right there one good reason for leading his J. Another was that North's double had placed most of the hostile high card strength with North, so that a high lead through him was preferable to a low one. But West led his spade 3, the fourth-best.

When North played the 8 on this, East was afraid South might have the J, either singleton or doubleton. So he didn't dare play his 9 or 10. He put up the K, and returned the club 10 to try to limit cross-ruffing of the red suits. It brought forth the J, Q and K. Declarer then led to the club 9, sent the heart 10 through, then the heart J, cleared trumps with the club A, laid down the heart A and led the diamond 7. East could not guess his partner's singleton K, so split his honors, the J losing to the A, which at the same fell stroke dropped the K.

Now it was easy. The diamond 3 to the 10 lost to the Q and East hated to lead A diamond lead from his 8-4 into the 9-6 was distatesful, so he laid down the spade A. South ruffed this, played the diamond 9 for a discard of the heart Q, ruffed the diamond 6 in dummy and cashed the now set-up spade Q for the final trick. Notice what a different story there would have been if West had made it easy for his partner with an opening lead of the spade J.

Tomorrow's Problem.

	♠ 10 5 2 ♥ 10 6 4 3 ♦ 9 5 2 ♣ K 5 4
♠ Q 6 3 ♥ A K Q 8 ♦ 7 3 ♣ Q 10 8 7	N. W. E. S.	♠ 7 4 ♥ J 9 2 ♦ K 8 4 ♣ J 9 6 3 2
	♠ A K J 9 8 ♥ 7 5 ♦ A Q J 10 6 ♣ A

(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

If West makes three heart honor leads against South's 4-Spades, how should he play to make his contract?

Miami Moves to MADISON STAGE With Coming of Lavish Revue

BARGAIN PRICES UNTIL 2 P. M.

THESE ARE SOME OF THE REASONS why you'll never forget "Midnight in Miami," tropical-flavored girl and laugh festival which plays on the stage of the Madison Wednesday and Thursday.

Packing a gorgeous bundle of femininity, a stock assortment of entertainment and novelty plus flashy settings, lavish wardrobe and startling lighting effects, "Midnight in Miami" is described as an exact carbon copy of the brilliant shows seen by America's 400 at leading Miami night clubs. The only difference is that "Midnight in Miami" is more pretentious and considerably larger than the shows offered in the limited floor space of the Miami clubs.

Carrying 35 people, "Midnight in Miami" is one of the largest revues on the road today. In addition the personnel of the show is entirely new to this territory.

Stressing feminine pulchritude and socko and novel entertainment, "Midnight in Miami" offers in addition to the 10 Miami Bathing Beauties, a solid lineup of outstanding acts. Marvin Boone and Helen Taft, youthful exponents of the tap dance have appeared in Florida night clubs and hotels for the past three years in addition to touring for several years in vaudeville. Originators of their own novel dance routines the youthful pair recently was honored with an award by the Dance Masters of America for outstanding contributions to the art of tap dancing.

The Newman Brothers, uproariously funny knockabout comedians, have appeared in night clubs and vaudeville from coast to coast and recently completed work in four film shorts slated for early release. The crazy pair last fall concluded two full seasons at the Golden Gate Exposition in San Francisco.

Kohn and DePinto, "Swingers of the Sweet and Hot" have long been featured artists in leading clubs and hotels throughout the country with their novelty musical turn. They were highlighted at the exclusive Coply-Plaza, Miami, the last two seasons.

McGrath and Deeds have been termed by critics "Two of America's funniest men." They have appeared in countless movie shorts as well as in the leading theaters. Their most recent engagement was at Billy Rose's Diamond Horse Shoe in New York City.

The Rosazina Troupe have played around the world twice with their thrilling tight-wire act appearing in clubs, theaters and circuses. Their daring work on the tight-wire is the chief thrill producer in "Midnight in Miami."

Remember, "Midnight in Miami" plays at the Madison Wednesday and Thursday! Don't miss it!

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS GIVES YOU

EXTRA MILDNESS, EXTRA COOLNESS, EXTRA FLAVOR

AND

28% LESS NICOTINE

than the average of the 4 other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself.

THE SMOKE'S THE THING!

YES, when you smoke the slower-burning cigarette...Camel...you have the pleasing assurance of modern laboratory science that you're getting less nicotine in the smoke.

Not only extra freedom from nicotine—but other important extras as well—extra mildness, extra coolness, and extra flavor, too, for Camel's slower way of burning means freedom from flavor-dulling excess heat and the irritating qualities of too-fast burning.

There's economy in Camels, too—extra smoking per pack.

And by the carton, Camels are even more economical.

Try slower-burning Camels. Compare them by smoking them. For, in a cigarette, the smoke's the thing—and Camel's the smoke!

CAMERAS...ALL SET FOR "AMERICA'S MOST TELEVISED GIRL"!
Beauty, voice, dramatic ability—it takes more than one talent to click in television. And it takes more than mildness to click with television actress Sue Read in a cigarette. "I smoke Camels," she says. "They combine a grand extra flavor and extra coolness with the extra mildness that is so essential to me."
SUCH A GRAND-TASTING CIGARETTE—CAMELS. AND THEIR EXTRA MILDNESS IS VERY IMPORTANT TO ME!

THERE ARE NO "RETAKES" in television. Every night is first night. "That's the thrill of it," says Miss Read. "And the thrilling thing about Camels to me is that they always taste so good. I don't get tired of smoking Camels. And they really are so much cooler and milder."

The more you smoke Camels, the more you'll appreciate the freedom from the irritating qualities of excess heat...the extra mildness and extra coolness of Camel's slower-burning, costlier tobaccos. And you'll enjoy Camel's full, rich flavor all the more, knowing—by the word of independent tests—that you're getting less nicotine in the smoke (see above, left).

BY BURNING 25% SLOWER than the average of the 4 other largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—Camels also give you a smoking plus equal, on the average, to
